EXODUS TO RESORTS BEGINS

Society People Following Their Usual Summer Program of Travel.

NUPTIAL CEREMONIES OF THE LAST WEEK

Season Approaches When Brilliant Affairs Are All Given at the Watering Places-Where the Elect Gather.

The summer exodus is, as is only to b expected at this season of the year, in full swing, and members of the society world of Omaha are conspicuous by their railroad. absence, as are the many functions and brilliant affairs which follow in their train. Every day the town house of one or more of Omaha's 400, known for its charming entertainments and lavish hospitality, is abandoned for its country cousin, and with light hearts and a welcome sense of perfect freedom from social duties, its happy inmates shake the dust of the city from their feet, and go forth on their several journeys, prepared to drink to the fullest extent of the invigorating breezes from which they expect to derive great benefit.

To seek some summer resort is wisely considered by the members of the swell set to be the universal panacea for all the woes the flesh is heir to, and there to while away the time with simple pleasures and in pastures new and green to rusticate to one's heart's content.

During the last six days there have been several affairs of interest to the society world on the tapis, among which have been a goodly sprinkling of nuptial ceremonles, one or two most enjoyable, though informal dinner parties, and affairs of one sort and another for the diversion of the out-of-town guests, of whom there are quite a few in the city.

Read-Brown.

The interior of Piedmont Heights, the mountain home of Major M. W. Wood, grandfather of the bride, was transformed into a cower of beauty with California palms and flowers, when the marriage of Miss Jessie Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Brown, and Prof. Irving Read was solemnized at high noon on Wednesday, July 5. The bride was charming in a gown of silk, with a hat of white straw, chiffon and ostrich plumes. She carried white sweet peas. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles R. Brown, pastor of the First Congregational church, under an arch of palms, carnations, roses and sweet peas. After congratulations, the guests repaired to the dining room, which was prettily decorated, where an elaborate wedding breakfast awaited them. The large, round table was arranged with a centerpiece of pink carnations and lighted by shaded candelabra. There were corsage bouquets of pink carnations for all the women present excepting the bride, who had a white one, and white carnation boutonnieres for the men. Each guest was provided with a little box containing wedling cake as a souvenir of the happy event, Mr. and Mrs. Read took the afternoon train for Monterey, where they stayed until last Tuesday, July 11, when they left for Los Angeles, to be present at the meeting of the National Educational association. They will be at home to their friends at 2215 Binney street after September 1.

CONTROVERSY OVER A TOWN

Disputed Ownership of Land on Which Yuma, Colo., is Located.

CASE HAS BEEN THROUGH SEVERAL COURTS

George F. Embler Asserts that the Land Rightfully Belongs to Him Because of irregularity in Its Original Entry.

Judge T. J. Shiras of the United States ircuit court has sustained a demurrer in the celebrated case of George F. Emblem against the Lincoln Townsite company and others, thereby holding that the plaintiff had Business at the stock yards is holding up no vested right in certain property which remarkably well these days and an increase he claimed to have gained possession of in Colorado in 1888. been pursuing the uneven tenor of its way through court after court. It involves title to a quarter section of land in Colorado. upon which the town of Yuma is now located. This land, it seems, was originally located by one George F. Weed. On October 4, 1888, Emblem contested it on the ground that Weed had not complied with management of the stock yards company the necessary legal requirements to retain possession of the property. The case was first taken before the register and receiver of the Denver land office, in which district the land was situated. These officers recommended a dismissal of the contest. The plaintiff carried the case to the general land office and Lewis A. Groff, formerly a judge on the district bench in Omaha, who was at that time commissioner of the general land office, sustained the contest of Emblem and reversed the decision of the Denver land office officials. The next step tional freight charges and striking a lower in the case was a rehearing which was market they have given it out that hereafter granted Weed. A redistricting of the Colorado public lands had meantime been made and the rehearing was brought before the land office officials of Akron, who dismissed Iowa are full of hogs and it is expected that the contest and gave Weed right of possession. Emblem alleges that one of the officers of the Akron land office was interested with Weed in the property and on this ground an appeal was taken to the Postmaster Etter did not take charge of general land office, where the plaintiff's claim was rejected again. The case finally got into the Department do. Late in the afternoon Major Cramer, of the Interior. It had become of general superintendent of construction, received a public interest because the town of Yuma telegram from Washington directing him to had been located on the disputed land. Its remain in charge of the building until the first introduction into the department reend of the month. The work of completing suited in a defeat for the plaintiff. Next the structure is being pushed as rapidly as Hoke Smith, who had meantime been appointed to the Department of Interior, rendered a decision in favor of Emblen, sustaining the previous decision of Commis sloner Groff. He recommended a rehearing at Akron.

At this, the defendants in the case, it is claimed, brought about a continuance and carried the matter into the halls of congress, where, on December 29, 1894, an act was passed affirming the title of George F. Weed to the property. The plaintiff dis-putes the validity of this congressional acillegal owing to the fact that at the time of passage of the act, the question of title was pending with the general land

One peculiar feature in the case is the presence of a document filed April 27, 1889, in which Emblen waives all his rights in the case. The claim is now set up that this document was of no legal merit, and that when it was filed the land office officials at Denver refused to recognize it, claiming that the contest was in operation and the filing of such a document was not sufficient to invalidate it until the proper evidence had been taken and passed upon. The case is an important one. The town of Yuma, situated upon the land in con troversy, is a thriving little city in Colorado, and in the event that Emblen should eventually prove victorious in this contest proceeding he will be in position to recover from all those who have purchased any property in the town, in the shape of

Makes a Vigorous Answer to Charges Made in the Campaign Against Him.

The quarters of the Sixth Ward Republican club at Twenty-fourth and Grant streets were crowded last night to hear Judge Fawcett, who had promised to answer in detail one or two charges that have been circulated by those who are opposing him in his campaign for renomination. Judge Fawcett spoke at considerable length and with a good deal of spirit, and at the close of his remarks the club, by a unanimous vote, repeated its previous endorsement of his can-

Judge Fawcett first spoke of the Henry Mack injunction matter, which, he said, has been vigorously worked by his enemies to turn the colored voters of the ward against him. Mack is a colored man who owns a lot and cottage east of the Twentieth street fence on the exposition grounds. The exposition management wanted to buy this place when the grounds were selected, but there was a difference of $100 in regard to the price and the exposition people built the fence, leaving the question of damages to be settled later. Mack tore down the fance as often as it was rebuilt and on the application of the exposition management, and after a hearing. Judge Fawcett granted a temporary injunction to restrain Mack from tearing down the fence, exacting a bond of $1,000 from the exposition to secure Mack for whatever damages he might sustain by reason of the fence. Judge Fawcett stated that the report had been circulated that he had prevented Mack from securing any damages and, after explaining the facts, he produced the records of the district court to show that the case had been settled, together with Mack's receipt for $300, in full settlement of his

That this explanation was satisfactory was indicated after he had closed when George Collins and a number of other colores voters of the ward spoke briefly to say that they had been misinformed on the subject and that after hearing Judge Fawcett's explanation they would take off their coats and help re-elect him. Judge Fawcett also entered into a de tailed discussion of his action in regard to the garbage cases, on account of which he said he had incurred the opposition of car tain persons, and after reviewing the gar bage contract in terms of vigorous condem nation he declared that he would repeat what he said from the bench, that it is an iniquitous and unjust monopoly.

NEW COMPANY ORGANIZED

Has a Capitalization of $15,000 for the Manufacture of Gas Engines.

A plant will be established soon in Omaha for the manufacture of gasoline engines. A company has been formed with a capitalization of $150,000, all paid in, and the stock will be placed on the market on Monday. The officers of the new company, which is this case during the many years that it has to be known as the Omaha Gas Engine and Motor company, are: H. C. Akin, president; H. K. Clover, vice president; D. Risley, secretary; F. E. Coulter, treasurer; O. E. Gugler, superintendent. H. K. Clover, the inventor of the new engine to be manufactured by this company, is a first lieutenant in the United States Naval Engineer corps stationed at Tampa. The superiority of this engine over any ther with gasoline as the motive power lies in the fact that Mr. Clover has dis covered a means whereby two explosion can be secured for each rotation of the driving wheel so that the action of the wheel is practically continuous. Formerly the best that could be secured was a jerky little motion with one explosion for every four rotations of the drivewheel. Mr. Clover has moreover discovered that crude petroleum can be utilized to generate gas and will cost about 80 cents per day to guages and art; competent corps of teachers. run an eight horse-power engine. The great possibility in the reduction of weight makes it altogether probable that the engine will be most valuable for use in the manufacture of automobiles. The lightest engine now employed for automobiles weighs in the neighborhood of 900 pounds. This engine of six horse-power can be constructed to weigh not more than ninety pounds. The mechanical scientists at this time are looking to the gas engine to revolutionize the efficiency of automobiles, and Mr Clover believes that he has solved the prob

Motion Day in Court.

All the law judges of the district court coupled their benches yesterday to hear notions and arguments on routine matters but no cases were taken up. Both the Bartley case before Judge Fawcett and the case before Judge Baxter went over to this week and the matters that were considered were of little interest to any one except the attorneys and litigants. Walker Waives Examination.

John Walker, charged with shooting with intent to kill Thaddeus Hockley at Sixcenth and Nicholas streets, waived exami nation before Judge Gordon Saturday after-noon and was held to answer in the disveed to the property. The plaintiff dis-utes the validity of this congressional ac-ion, claiming that such a decisive step was zance. He is still nursing the wound made by the bullet in his left arm.
