

INSTRUCTS FOR THE STATE

Judge Fawcett Practically Takes the Bartley Case from the Jury.

IT MEANS VERDICT FOR THE FULL AMOUNT

Defendants Will Ask for a New Trial and Take the Case to the Supreme Court—Ruling as to Mrs. Fitzgerald.

The Bartley case went to the jury late yesterday afternoon and under the instructions of the court the jury will be required to return a verdict for the full amount claimed by the state. The state asked that the jury should be advised that it must report finding for the full amount claimed against all the defendants except Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald and that, if it found from the evidence that Mrs. Fitzgerald was of sound mind at the time she signed the bond, she must also be held responsible. This was on the proposition that the amount of the defalcation, as it appeared from the books of the treasurer's office, and the fact that it occurred during Bartley's second term, was conclusive evidence that had not been successfully disputed by the defense.

Judge Fawcett made his ruling on this application when court convened yesterday morning. He stated that he could see no other view than to sustain the motion and instruct the jury as required. He explained that, however much he might sympathize with the defendants from motives of friendship, he could not thoroughly believe the authorities and reviewed the evidence the more firmly he became convinced that he would not be justified in sending all these contentions to the jury. He consequently stated that the only matter the jury would have to consider is the sanity of Mrs. Fitzgerald, and whether she is to be held as responsible with the other defendants.

No comment was made by any of the attorneys on the ruling, and the jury was called in to hear the argument on the one question that is left for it to decide. Mr. Manahan stated that none of the other attorneys for the defense wished to be heard, and Mr. Smyth said that Mr. Oldham would open the argument for the state and he would close it himself. Mr. Manahan then reviewed the evidence that related to Mrs. Fitzgerald's mental condition and made vigorous pleas for the release of his client. He was followed by Mr. Oldham and Mr. Smyth.

Under the instructions that were given by Judge Fawcett the jury will be required to return a verdict against the defendants for the full amount of $55,730.56, with interest from January 7, 1897, when Bartley went out of office, and which makes the total $646,382.45. As far as the purposes of the state are concerned, it does not matter whether Mrs. Fitzgerald is held or not, as the remaining bondsmen are liable for the full amount.

While the ruling of Judge Fawcett was apparently a knockout blow for the bondsmen, they seemed to take it as a matter of course, and express confidence that it will be reversed in the supreme court. Their attorneys will file a motion for a new trial, and if this is overruled they will appeal the case to the supreme court. Their confidence in a different verdict in the higher court is based on the fact that Judge Fawcett permitted the pleadings in the Lancaster county case against the first-term bondsmen to be introduced in evidence in this case. They assume that this raises a question whether the entire defalcation occurred during the second term, as is determined by the instructions, and that on this and other points the supreme court will decide that the evidence should have been allowed in the trial.

KAPLAN IS STILL ON THE STAND.

Testimony in Zacharia-Nathan Azeon Case Becomes Rather Sensational.

When the preliminary hearing of Wolff Zacharia and Phillip Nathan, who are charged with having set fire to the store at 1507 Farnam street last December, was resumed before Judge Baxter, Julius Kaplan was still on the stand and his cross-examination continued through the forenoon of yesterday. The witness was very excitable and his English occasionally broke down almost unintelligible under the severe fire of questions, but his answers did not materially differ from those which he made in his direct examination. His story was brought out in more detail and a good deal of it was of a decidedly sensational character. In his direct examination Kaplan referred to a conversation that he declared he had had with the defendants, in which Zacharia confessed to him that he had set fire to the store in order to get the insurance. He said that he came to Omaha last April and went to the store, where he was pleasantly greeted by both proprietors. After a short talk about business Zacharia told him that they were both doing well and had money. They said that there was only one way to make money, and that was to have a fire. He added that both he and Nathan were broke before the fire, but that they were both in good shape at the time the conversation occurred. Then Zacharia took him upstairs and showed him how the fire started. At the same time Zacharia said that he had a hard time with the insurance companies and the chief of police, but he had a good friend, Mr. Yates, who was on the arbitration committee and who pulled him through.

Continuing his version of this conversation, the witness said that he asked Zacharia how much they got out of it, and he told him $14,000. He explained that the loss could not have been over $50, and Zacharia had told him that Mr. Yates helped him fix that. In further explanation Zacharia said that Mr. Yates did a big business with the insurance companies, and he made them pay him the full amount.

The afternoon was occupied by the testimony of a number of witnesses to show that the actual value of the stock was materially less than the value claimed in his application for insurance.

HUNT CLAIMS HE WAS "DONE UP."

Answer in Belmont Canal Case, Defendant McShane Had No Influence.

Some weeks ago John A. McShane filed a suit in district court against George J. Hunt and other stockholders in the Belmont Irrigation Canal and Water Power company to secure a half interest in the enterprise, which he declared belonged to him in return for his services in securing the construction of a branch of the Burlington railroad to the territory covered by the enterprise, and to have a receiver appointed for the canal company. Hunt has now filed his separate answer in which he enters into a denial of the claims of McShane, and states that McShane merely used his previous knowledge that the Burlington intended to build the branch anyway to induce Hunt to give him a half interest in the company.

The Belmont canal is located on the south side of the city, about 1 1/2 miles from the city, about thirty-five miles north of Sidney, and the property is estimated as worth at least $100,000.

REFUSES TO CLOSE STREET

Council Again Declines to Adopt the Proposition of the Roads.

PROPOSED OUTLET FROM ENCLOSED LAND

Stuht Has a Scheme, but It Does Not Please More Than One Property Owner—No Saturday Holiday.

The city council again voted against the closing of Seventeenth street Monday afternoon in general committee meeting, by sending Lobeck's resolution, that the original proposition of the roads be accepted, to the general file. This resolution was introduced at the last regular council meeting, but was not acted upon then because one member of the council was absent. The full council was present yesterday.

Councilman Stuht exhibited the plan of a road to give some of the property which is enclosed by the Union Pacific and Burlington roads an outlet to the city by way of Twentieth street. It contemplates a route west on Williams street to Nineteenth, from Nineteenth west to George street or Nineteenth avenue on a road to be purchased from the city by one of the property owners and from Nineteenth avenue to Twentieth street by way of a road to be donated by the Burlington road. Stuht said that the Burlington officials had promised to give the land necessary for one of the streets.

The plan was urged upon the council by Stuht and Mr. Harpstrite, whose property it is intended to provide by providing an outlet. It was vigorously opposed by Ferdinand Streitz, because it contemplated grading a street adjoining some property of his sixteen or eighteen feet. Even though a retaining wall were built, he said, he would be damaged and he would not consent.

Stuht suggested that the proposed highway could also be used by the Paxton & Vierling iron works as an outlet from the plant, which is situated on the west side of the Sixteenth street viaduct, but Mr. Vierling said it was entirely too roundabout and long a way by which to reach the city. The councilmen generally refused to connect this proposition with the question of closing Seventeenth street and it was considered as an entirely distinct matter. Nothing definite was done with it.

The claim of Mrs. Henrietta Lang for $650 rent of a house, which it is alleged the city promised to restore to grade and left standing eleven months in an uninhabitable condition, was referred to the city engineer for an investigation of its merits.

Lobeck's resolution to give all city employees a half-holiday on Saturday with full pay came up and was made the subject for a number of jokes. Mercer moved to amend it to make it provide for a whole holiday on full pay, and the amendment was made to include all of Friday. Bingham moved to increase the pay of the laborers in the employ of the city from $1.50 to $1.75 per day. This was the straw that broke the camel's back, as it was discovered that the council had not authority to fix the pay of employees of the city, and the resolution was voted down while he was still sounding his praises.

On application of two property owners the penalty and interest on their real estate taxes were cancelled, the representation being a temporary injunction without effect, and successfully resisted in the courts.

Burmeister asked for and obtained an appropriation of $800 for the repair of the pavement on Douglas, Sixteenth and Fourteenth streets.

The charges for lighting viaducts and subways, which have been a bone of contention between the railroads and the city for some time and are mentioned in the viaduct proposition, were ordered paid. The council had the opinion of both the city attorney and his assistant that viaducts and subways are streets and that the city must light them.

John N. Hitt, a farmer who lives near Florence, was fined $200 and costs by Judge Scott for contempt of court in violating an injunction issued some time ago in a dispute between Ritter and Fred Byers over the location of the line between their properties. On representations of the attorneys the sentence was suspended until the September term of court.

LAWYERS HAVE FINE PICNIC

Get in Their Work on Prisoners While They Await Action of Police Judge.

Police court spectators had an opportunity yesterday morning to see half a dozen of the court attorneys getting in their work in good shape. As one of the officers put it "the grafters graft the people, and the lawyers graft the officers."

When Court Officer Johnson brought up the usual Monday morning rattle he left them inside the railing because it was cooler there, instead of putting them in the sweat box, known as the prisoners' booth. This gave the attorneys the chance for which they were waiting. They mingled with the prisoners and talked with them for the purpose of learning if they had any money and of what they were charged. When a prisoner entered a plea of not guilty he or she turned to find an attorney awaiting to hear the circumstances. In one case where a woman was charged with prostitution Judge Gordon read the complaint to her and she entered a plea of guilty. His honor assessed a fine of $5 and costs. She flashed a roll of bills from some hidden receptacle to pay her fine. This created a sensation in the ranks of the attorneys. One indicted her not to pay her fine for a while, as he believed he could get her off with a fine. Then she could enter a plea of not guilty and, as is customary in such cases, it would be impossible to convict her. The representation was made that the woman did not know to what she was pleading. Judge Gordon said he had read the complaint to her and that she got forth plainly that she was a lewd character. He believed any woman of the town ought to know what that meant and would not permit the withdrawal of the plea. She paid the clerk $7.50 much to the disgust of the attorneys, who disliked to see the money slip through their fingers.

A colored woman who entered a plea of guilty to prostitution and vagrancy was told to sit down and await sentence. While the attention of the court was taken up with other business a lawyer went to her and induced her to withdraw her plea of guilty as he believed he could get her off without a fine. This was permitted, and her case was continued until another day.

Announcements. There is nothing that appeals better to the masses of theater-goers than bright, sparkling comedy and good music. Everybody enjoys it, and that is the fact in mind and the management of the Trocadero vaudeville theater has provided a bill for this week in which music and comedy predominate.

A Great Medicine. "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. Phipps of Poteau, Ark. The quick cures which it effects in such a short time, and the ease it makes it a favorite everywhere.

Mortality Statistics. The following births and deaths have been reported to the office of the health commissioner during the past twenty-four hours: Births—Frank E. Underwood, 2521 Patrick avenue; a bright, healthy, white, vivacious street girl; Herman Gurek, 2421 21st street, girl.

OMAHAN KILLED IN EL PASO

Harry Barr Meets Death in a Texas Town—His Relatives in This City.

Proposed Outlet from Enclosed Land

Stuht Has a Scheme, but It Does Not Please More Than One Property Owner—No Saturday Holiday.

The chief of police received a telegram yesterday from Chief H. T. Lockhart of El Paso, Tex., informing him that Harry Barr of this city had been killed there, and requesting that relatives be notified quickly. No further information was forthcoming, so it is not known in what manner he met his death.

Harry Barr was the only son of Mrs. Emily C. Barr, a widow living at 2404 Jones street, and a brother to Mrs. George Devereaux of the same number. He was 24 years of age and well known in this city. He worked at the Krug grocery and meat market, prior to his departure from the city. Of revolving disposition, he started for Mexico four years ago, and was supposed to be there now, but the message indicates that he had crossed to El Paso for some purpose, if he was not living there at the time of his death.

Mrs. Devereaux was notified of the death of her brother, and in turn informed her mother. Both were greatly shocked by the news and seemed unable to comprehend it. Another telegram containing a description of the dead man in El Paso was received by the chief of police yesterday afternoon, and was shown to John Wead, a brother-in-law of the deceased, who said there was no doubt concerning the identity of the young man. He was positive that it was the son of Mrs. Emily Barr.

It seems that Hayden is a former partner of Simpson's in a fruit business. Simpson was charged with a satisfactory opening. He went back and demanded a rebate. When it was refused he drew his gun and chased Hayden into his place of business.

Wedding Invitations Recalled. On account of the sudden death of their little daughter, Adaline, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Coak have recalled the invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Miss Ellen Marie, to Dr. Robert P. Jensen. The marriage will be private, on July 26.

MUST PAY A SPECIAL TAX. Exhibition Concessionaires Are Within Limits of Internal Revenue War Collector.

Internal Revenue Collector Holt is after the concessionaires at the exposition. Commissioner Wilson has ruled that the shows are subject to a special tax and the local revenue men are appraising the amount of tax which it effects on each to pay. Last year the shows escaped the clutches of the government, but the decision of last year has been reversed, and all exhibitions charging a special fee will have to pay the internal revenue tax. The Greater American Exposition has already complied with the law. This tax, however, is not sufficient to cover separate exhibitions where another fee is levied on the public for admission. In order to escape this tax they would have to be under the direct supervision of the managers of the Greater American Exposition, which is not the case. The tax will vary in amount from $10 to $100.

READJUSTMENT OF RATES

St. Louis Wholesalers Have Overcome What They Considered Discrimination.

Proposed Outlet from Enclosed Land

Stuht Has a Scheme, but It Does Not Please More Than One Property Owner—No Saturday Holiday.

The wholesalers and jobbers of St. Louis have succeeded in overcoming what they considered a discrimination by the railroads in favor of Chicago. The regular merchants' excursions which are run into these cities during the present season have been accorded the same rates between out-lying points as both Chicago and St. Louis. The first announcement of the rates to St. Louis called for a fare of one and one-fifth on the certificate plan. Chicago had a rate of one fare plus $2, and a protest filed by the St. Louis secured for them the same rates. In order to secure advantage of these rates a membership in the Interstate Merchants' association is necessary.

SUMMER TRAVEL IS ENCOURAGING. Prevalent Prosperity Makes Outing Trips Possible for Many.

The passenger departments of all the railroads report that the travel this summer is more encouraging than it has been for several years, and the agents all attribute this to the general prosperity prevalent throughout the western states. A short time ago the passenger department of one of the Omaha roads sent a letter to the agents along its line instructing them to return the names of those people who ordinarily spend the summer at some outing place. The replies indicate that for this early in the season there has been a general exodus from the towns all over the state. Business men with their families who heretofore have been unable to enjoy the luxury of a summer outing have already held themselves to some popular retreat to spend a few weeks of the hot season. In this connection a passenger man said: "There is no accounting for the vagaries of summer travel. One year the world and all its relations go east; the next year to the west and the year after nobody stays at home. Fortunately, this is not the year when the latter condition prevails."

The general man then proceeded to relate a little history regarding the Black Hills of South Dakota, which section is coming more into prominence as a pleasure resort because of the many attractions it offers. When the Black Hills region was first opened up by the railroads there was a general rush thither by the summer travelers. Then came a reaction and the Black Hills seemed to have been cut off the calling lists of the tourists. This year a trip to that region seems to be quite the thing and the railroads entering there are carrying lots of health and pleasure seekers. The majority of these come from Nebraska, although there are many Kansans and Iowans, while other states have a very fair representation.

Big Excursion for August. The largest big eastern excursion on taps is scheduled for the 1st of August, when the annual convention of the Young People's Christian union of the United Presbyterian church will be held in Pittsburg. A special Burlington train will be run from the west for the benefit of the delegates. It will leave Denver on the afternoon of Monday, July 31, and go through Omaha the following morning at 6:40. Pittsburg will be reached on the 2d of August at 3:30 p. m. G. C. Wallace of Omaha is the chairman of the official transportation committee.

Promotions on Rock Island. Many friends among the Omaha railroad men are pleased to learn of the promotion of J. Mel, Stafford, who is well known here. Mr. Stafford, who has been city passenger and ticket agent for the Rock Island at Peoria, has been transferred to Chicago as assistant depot ticket agent, succeeding Phil Auer, who goes to New York state as traveling passenger agent for the same road. Mr. Stafford's successor at Peoria is Frank Mitchell, formerly depot ticket agent at Des Moines.

The announcement is made through the passenger department of the Missouri Pacific railroad that one of the scholarships in the University of New York endowed by Helen Gould at the death of her father is vacant and will be filled by competitive examination, preferably by some applicant from along the line of the railroad mentioned. The scholarship is worth $300 a year and is for a four-year's course.
