

WILL TREAT RAILROAD TIES

Plant Erected at Edgemont for Preservation of Wooden Ties.

TWO ROADS HAVE TRIED IT SUCCESSFULLY

Santa Fe and Southern Pacific Find that Chemical Solution Lengthens Life of Ties—New Burlington Plant Will Cost $40,000.

As exclusively announced in The Bee a few days ago, the Burlington road is rapidly progressing in the erection of a plant at Edgemont, S. D., which, when completed, will be used for the purpose of treating railroad ties by a process designed to preserve them.

The plant will cost $40,000 and it is expected to have it completed and ready for operation by October 1.

Since the earliest days of railroading the question of securing ties which would prove most serviceable and last the longest has been a serious one.

The constant wear and tear on the ties has necessitated the replacement of old ones as soon as they are perceptibly worn.

The Santa Fe road, it is believed, is the first company to originate a plan whereby the length of service of the ordinary ties can be increased.

A solution of chloride of zinc was applied to all ties by a specially arranged process and the experiment has been a success.

The Burlington road at Edgemont as the most conveniently situated plant for erecting the plant, as most of the ties used on this system are cut in the Black Hills and the Big Horn mountains and Edgemont is the junction of the lines which operate in these localities.

General Superintendent Calvert of the Burlington, in speaking of the new plant, says: "Our Edgemont tie-preserving plant will treat about 3,000 ties per day.

The process is what is known as the chloride of zinc process, the same as that used by the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific roads.

We have a yard at Edgemont, in which we can store 25,000 ties. It is necessary that they be piled up and allowed to season for about sixty days before they are in shape to treat."

BOISE EXPECTS THROUGH TRAINS.

Short Line Contemplates Change of Route Affecting Idaho's Capital.

There is a strong probability that the city of Boise, Idaho, will soon be placed on the main line of the Oregon Short Line.

Instead of having to content itself with a branch service from Nampa, twenty miles away, the citizens of Boise have taken the matter into their own hands and a short time ago held a rousing mass meeting, in which they agreed to furnish the grade for the road provided it be run, by means of a loan, through the city.

While George Elliott was wheeling Mrs. Catherine T. Price, 1517 Burdett street, down the street Friday evening about 7:30 he was run into by a buggy driven by L. Whittenberger.

While the criminal court has been practically closed for the day, the police court has been grinding out new cases, and there is a big bunch of offenders waiting for arraignment.

HER LOVER TAKES HER MONEY

Schuyler Girl Loses Her Cash to a Barber Who Had Fascinated Her.

Life in a large city has proven expensive to Rosal Palinsky and her experience with men came high. She was with a man who had seen the sights of Omaha and was about to depart for Grand Island when she was robbed, she says, of $60 by Ernest Truax, a barber.

Miss Palinsky came from Schuyler to Omaha a few months ago and has been working at 2313 Farnam street. She is a quiet, unassuming, hard-working girl. She became acquainted with Truax through a mutual friend. Their acquaintance increased in cordiality as time progressed.

TRIBUTE TO COL. INGERSOLL

Rev. Hawes of First Universalist Church Talks of His Boyhood Days.

Rev. Lewis M. Hawes of the First Universalist church of this city was the friend of Robert G. Ingersoll in the days of his youth. What Mr. Hawes has to say about that period of Ingersoll's life is very interesting, as it shows his true character—the nobility of his nature.

"The announcement of Robert G. Ingersoll's death has awakened my recollection of his early boyhood," said Mr. Hawes. "His father, Rev. John Ingersoll, was pastor of the Presbyterian church at Belleville, Jefferson county, N. Y., in 1829-40, about two years. During that time the family lived but a few doors from my home, and nearly every day I saw Robert, as well as others of the family. He is distinctly remembered by me as a bright, thoughtful boy, possessing an amiable and winsome disposition.

"His religious training was decidedly sectarian, such as his father was most desirous he should receive. He was required to see himself in the Calvinistic mirror of election and reprobation. That he should turn away from the view thus presented to him disgusted and horrified in what might be naturally expected of one of his tender sensibilities of soul.

"Overbend it and it breaks" was the moral which Aesop would teach as he flung his bended bow at the feet of his master.

"Although not indorsing the peculiar religious views of Mr. Ingersoll, yet I accord to him the right to honestly entertain these views. That he sincerely believed what he advocated few will deny. He was willing to stand or fall by the belief which he professed.

"There is no prevailing style of architecture. It takes the widest possible variance. In houses men and women are a good deal like they are with their wearing apparel. They don't want a dress nor a suit like anyone else, and so when it comes to building a house everyone wants something different from every other person.

"The victims of Hay Fever increase in numbers every year. It has long ago ceased to be a disease that is mostly confined to the aristocrats and 'snobs' of the country. It is now common with all classes and conditions and is a mid-summer curse now dreaded by millions of people.

MANY NEW BUILDINGS GO UP

Present Season is Marked by Exceptional Activity in Building Circles.

IMPROVEMENTS OF A SUBSTANTIAL NATURE

Warehouses in Strict Demand—Handsome Residences Under Way in Various Parts of City—Omaha Property Good Investment.

The building situation in Omaha was never more encouraging than at the present time. This statement is supported by the consensus of opinion of all the leading architects, contractors and builders in the city, who for several months have had extraordinary demands made upon them for work attendant upon the erection of many buildings in different parts of the city.

An estimate of the improvements in dollars and cents would not convey the proper idea of the value of these additions. Not only are they of superior workmanship and design, but they represent the conversion of money into homes and business establishments of a substantial character and erected with the single idea of permanency.

One of the most important denominational institutions for which plans have been completed and arrangements made for immediate construction is the House of the Good Shepherd, in West Omaha. The new building will be constructed on the pavilion plan and will consist of three stories by the main front, 200x250. Boiler room, wash house and outside buildings will also be erected.

When completed the building will accommodate about 250, and its primary object will be a school of reformation for young girls. There will also be a preservation department for the care of the children of the rearing up of children rescued from unwholesome surroundings.

Regarding the subject of labor a man well informed upon the situation states: "Since this season has been such an exceptionally good one from a building standpoint there has been a demand for expert mechanics and the supply of the proper kind of workmen has not been equal to the demand. This same state of affairs exists with the lumber manufacturers, the iron dealers and the brick yards. All have orders enough to keep them busy for several months, and if the building epidemic continues it will be necessary to provide additional facilities for supplying the articles of building material for which there is such a popular demand at this time."

Prevents Hay Fever. The victims of Hay Fever increase in numbers every year. It has long ago ceased to be a disease that is mostly confined to the aristocrats and "snobs" of the country. It is now common with all classes and conditions and is a mid-summer curse now dreaded by millions of people.

THE LABOR SITUATION. Regarding the subject of labor a man well informed upon the situation states: "Since this season has been such an exceptionally good one from a building standpoint there has been a demand for expert mechanics and the supply of the proper kind of workmen has not been equal to the demand. This same state of affairs exists with the lumber manufacturers, the iron dealers and the brick yards. All have orders enough to keep them busy for several months, and if the building epidemic continues it will be necessary to provide additional facilities for supplying the articles of building material for which there is such a popular demand at this time."
