SCENES, ALONG THE MIDWAY.

Most People of Streets Attend Divine Worship.

During the morning hours the streets of the Midway were as quiet as those in the residence portion of the city. Now and then some party, attired in fine raiment, would step out of some side door, take a look around and return. Shortly after 19 o'clock a curious procession wended its way to the streets of Cario. There were men and women of all nations, freaks of about every kind, and they were all bent on one purpose, that of attending divine worship.

Coaching Party.

A brother of William Priborsky, the young nan who disappeared from his home, 1406 outh Twelfth street, July 9, called at the indertaking rooms of Coroner Swanson Sunday morning to see the pieces of cloth aken from the remains found Saturday night on a sandbar near Gibson. He thought they resembled the pattern of cloth wora by his brother, but to make sure took the pleces down to his mother, who identified hem positively. She was sure there was no question of the identity of the deceased, but an examination of the body may be made. It was interred in Forest Lawn made.

Runaway Accident.

Sunday afternoon a runaway accident oc-curred on St. Mary's avenue, terminating at Fwenty-fourth street in a very lucky man ner. Mr. Beck, who was out driving with his wife and his son-in-law and daughter, held the runaway team pretty well in check for a time, but when they began to get the better of him he turned them into a bank. The vehicle was upset and badly wrecked. The occupants, however, escaped
