ESCAPES ON TECHNICALITY

Roy Gives Secures His Freedom by Reason of a Defective Law.

BURGLARY SAFE UNDER SOME CONDITIONS

Daylight Entering of a Storehouse No Crime—Justice Holds the Anti-Trust Law Unconstitutional.

Judge Baker holds that there is no law against daylight burglary of a storehouse, and hereafter when Assistant County Attorney Hestley wants to convict someone for that offense he will be careful to call the storehouse by some other name, necessarily one of those mentioned in the statute against daylight burglary.

As soon as a jury had been secured to try Owens, Attorney Wappich, for the defense, made a motion to dismiss the case for the reason that the law did not make it a crime to break into a storehouse. He cited the statute, which enumerates a dozen or more buildings which must not be entered, among them dwellings and warehouses, but does not say anything about a storehouse. He showed that the building in which the offense complained of was alleged to have taken place was not a part of the dwelling, though it adjoined it, and could not be called a warehouse under the dictionary definition of that term. The court sustained the motion and the accused gained his liberty.

It is claimed that there are men now in the penitentiary who have been convicted under complaints made out in the form of the one against Owens, and the interesting question is raised whether they are not entitled to their freedom on the grounds that they are confined for a crime which, under the Nebraska law, does not exist.

STATE ANTI-TRUST LAW INVALID. Foster Holds It Denies to Some Privileges Accorded to Others.

In deciding the case of John J. Haughen against Emmett W. McConnell Justice Foster has held that the anti-trust law passed by the legislature of 1887 is unconstitutional for the reason that it grants special privileges to certain classes. The Master Plumbers' association, the court held, was a trust under the definition given in the statute, but nevertheless the plaintiff, who is a member of it, was given judgment for the full amount asked.

The definition of a trust given in the statute is very broad, including every conceivable combination of men engaged in the production, exchange or transportation of any article of merchandise tending to prevent competition or in any other way control prices. In another section the law specifically excepts from its operation trade unions. The court held that trade unions were included under the definition of trusts in that they were combinations to fix the price of labor and thus contributed to the control of prices. The ground for the decision is the same as that upon which the supreme court declared the eight-hour law unconstitutional, that law specifically excepting from its provisions persons engaged in domestic or farm labor.

Rate War in Sight. A rate of $5.00 from Chicago to Omaha over the Burlington and Rock Island will be placed in effect today. This cut is in accord with the action taken by the Chicago and Alton in meeting rates made by brokers. This reduction will affect all Missouri river points. It is possible that the Chicago & Alton will make a still greater cut, to be followed by the Rock Island and Burlington.

PUTS HIGH PRICE ON KISSES

Police Judge Decides a Kiss is Worth a Day in Jail and Sentences a Youth Accordingly.

A day's imprisonment for a kiss is the penalty paid by John Doelock for snatching a few stray kisses from the lips of pretty girls who thronged the sidewalks the last night of the Ak-Sar-Bon parade. Doelock was one of the coterie of offenders ushered before Judge Gordon at the morning session of police court. He was arrested by Special Officer Buel on the charge of hobnobbing the women. Doelock pleaded guilty. He said the girls didn't seem to care and he thought anything was fair in love, war, or Ak-Sar-Bon parades, so he kissed every girl who came his way.

The judge couldn't understand the motive for the arrest if the girls didn't object. The officer thereupon explained that in his enthusiasm Doelock kissed a young and pretty married woman, whose husband happened to see him and took offense. The husband insisted upon arrest, so there was nothing for the officer to do but to take Doelock to jail. The judge thought the husband was the injured party, and not the wife, for he levied a ten-days' sentence against Doelock and called for the next case. After making a reckoning Doelock concluded he had stolen just ten kisses. "That's a day behind the bars for every kiss," he remarked to the court officer as he passed out the door. "If a good thing for Hobson he didn't come to Omaha. Judge Gordon would have imprisoned him for life."

Holds There is No Evidence. George Button, arrested for the theft of a watch from Sarah Smith, Capitol avenue and Twelfth street, has been discharged by Judge Gordon. During the hearing it developed that Button was the only man who had been in the room where the watch was kept by its owner, and a few minutes after he went out the timepiece was discovered missing. When Button was arrested in Council Bluffs the watch was found in his possession. He told the police that it had been bought from a soldier in this city, but when the soldier named was placed on the witness stand he swore he did not sell the timepiece to Button. The judge said there was no evidence that Button was guilty.

BARTENDER BREAKS MAN'S LEG

Saloon Employee Knocks Ex-Police-man Off Step During a Fight and Fractures His Ankle.

David Brown, a horse trader, was taken to the Presbyterian hospital yesterday suffering with a broken leg. The injury was received in an encounter with William Sutherland, bartender at the Brunswick hotel bar. The men had a dispute and started to settle it according to Marquis of Queensbury rules, when Sutherland, realizing a fight in the saloon would be bad for the place, asked Brown to come outside and fight.

Brown accepted the invitation and was on his way out the back door when Sutherland leaped to have struck him a hard blow on the chin, knocking him from the stone steps to the sidewalk. He fell heavily and was unable to arise. Bystanders who saw the blow struck and ran to Brown's assistance found that his right leg had been broken at the ankle. The man connected with the saloon allowed Brown to remain on the walk without care until one of the crowd sent for the patrol wagon, in which he was removed to the hospital for treatment.

Sutherland made his escape and was not arrested. Brown was formerly a member of the South Omaha police force. He lives at 620 North Nineteenth street.

Ticket Seller Discharged. S. A. Philpot, ticket seller for the seat concession at the exposition, appeared in police court yesterday morning to answer to the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The complainant, Jay Burns, superintendent of concessions, was not present to prosecute the case and Judge Gordon dismissed it.
