Point Out That English Forces Have Done Well Under Circumstances -Lansdowne in for a Severe Roast.

(Copyright, 1899, by Associated Press.) LONDON, Nov. 4 .- Almost the only subject of discussion this week in England was the disastrous reverse suffered by General Sir George Stewart White, the British commander at Ladysmith, and this was made the sociated Press today: occasion for pouring out torrents of lay calls out a second and a third army corps, as criticism and advice. Public opinion seems I believe is quite possible, it will be time to fairly divided, one section bitterly blaming say whether the mobilization system is extended the general commanding and the other maintaining that he probably is not so much at Should a third corps ever be wanted, I fault as he made himself out. The latter think you will find the percentages of resection, which includes many service men servists who answered the first call reduced and nearly all the service publications, urges by nearly 50 per cent." the withholding of definite criticism pending more detailed accounts. Roast for Lansdown.

Although this may fairly be said to represent conservative military opinion, its reference to the action of the opposition as preventing the sending of troops in good time entirely erroneous. Since the first news of the Ladysmith disaster reached England there has been a storm gathering over the head, not of Sir George White, but of the secretary of state for war, the marquis of Lansdown, and this emanates not so much from the opponents of the government as from its warmest suporters. Some of the ablest of the latter have no heeltation in saying privately that almost criminal neglect has been shown in not sending at least 10,000 more troops before or by October 4 and that if Lord Lansdown's hands were tied by higher powers he ought to exculpate himself beyond the shadow of a suspicion.

The failure to send out troops enough cannot be charged to the opposition, for Parliament was not then sitting. If there were any intention to hold Natal at all costs an adequate force should have been sent out by October 4, when the excuse that such reinforcements might be taken by the Boers as a menace no longer held good, as the Indian troops were already on the way.

Hearing these criticisms in unexpected quarters, the correspondent of the Associated Press repeated them to a high official. While noncommittal regarding the failure to send reinforcements earlier, this official declared that the broad line of policy affecting Natal had been much misunderstood. often asked," said he, "why we sent Sir George Stewart White up the neck of Natal unless we were sure he could hold it. Considering the tremendous reinforcements now on the way to him, it occurs to almost every body, at first sight, that we ought to have retired without risking engagements; but it is forgotten what would happen in Natal unless we made a vigorous stand there.

Lives Not Wasted.

"Natal has risked her little all on behalf of the empire; and the least we can do is to risk something ourselwes and to prevent the overrunning of her prosperous towns and rich fields by hordes of the enemy. Purely military considerations, I admit, might point to the fact that we ought immediately to have withdrawn from our advanced positions, but purely military considerations have sometimes to be subordinated to the interests of the empire, and, although many good lives have been lost in the cause, they have not been wasted."

The acceptance of the offers of Sir William MacCormac, Dr. Frederick Treves and other eminent civilian surgeons for service in South Africa has drawn attention to the serious undermanning of the army medical staff. The total strength of the department is only 840, which is 20 per cent below the figures of forty years ago and actually fifty officers below the absolute minimum decided upon in 1884. This state of affairs is due doubtless to the insufficient compensation of-

Report of the Officers of the Association for the Past Year.

VISITING NURSES

The officers of the Visiting Nurse Association have made their annual reports upon the organization's third year of success ful activity, and in them are shown the system and scope of the relief work carried on. The year has been a busy one, over 400 cases having been cared for. Deaths among these numbered twenty-three, the larger part of which were from chronic diseases.

The active superintendence of the work has been done this year, as last, by Mrs. W. R. Adams, whose services have been entirely gratuitous. During the first seven or eight months a nurse was employed for the whole Mrs. Adams has engaged nurses from day to day, and the plan has proved so satisfactory that the association is still working without a regularly employed nurse. There have been of scarlet fever, measles and cholera infantum, and those requiring night nursing. Perhaps the larger part of the association nurses' work is the instruction of those having care of the sick. Upon first entering a home the nurse talks with the members of remove the strain. Then she shows how the patient should be dressed, how the bed should be made, a bath given in bed without allowing the patient to take and costumes of subdued tints that their cold, what nourishment should be given and how. In a case of rheumatism she rubs the patient gently and leaves her much more comfortable than before. When the case dewith a promise to return the next day at a stated hour.

Sometimes the nurse finds an apt pupil in some member of the family, as was the case with the wife of a man seriously ill with pneumonia the past winter. The man was the head of a large family and could illy have been spared, but through his wife's capabilities as a nurse and the instructions of the visiting nurse his life was saved. Seven visits a day is the average day's work in Omaha that a great deal of time is consumed in getting from place to place. Mrs. Adams says in regard to the co-operation with which the association has met "The work that has been accomplished could never have been done without the hearty co-operation of other charitable orthe following dispatch to the Associated ganizations of the city and the doctors, who have never failed to respond to our call. Interested friends of the work have subscribed so generously the past year that it has been necessary to give but two entertainments. The membership list, however, was comparatively small. Since an increased list would make the association financially independent the association aims to make the roll for 1900 reach 1,000.

The distances are so great his feeble strategy, is now declared to be merely a good regimental commander, but never qualified or experienced in handling large bodies of troops. He won his Victoria Cross by leading a forlorn hope against an Afghan stronghold and though he received three wounds he carried a dying private of his regiment out of the fire line. He is 62, an ideal soldler in appearance, once reckoned the handsomest man in the British army and a noted eportsman. Two years ago when commander-in-chief of the indian army, he broke his right leg while hunting in Simla. For ten months the bones refused to knit and through eight of them he lay on a couch, the injured limb in a plaster splint. The surgeon then sawed off both broken ends of the bone and then stitched them together with a silver wire which still remains, so that White went on this campaign with one leg an inch shorter | held between the present time and the openthan the other.

Uses His Revolver Recklessly. Louis Metz, of Metz Bros. brewers, telephoned the police Friday night that someone at Ninth and Jackson had taken four shots at him and he had sought refuge in the Union Facific freight depot. An officer was sent to investigate, but the assailant had fied. In passing Ninth and Leavenworth on his search about that territory a window was opened and two shots were fired at the policeman. He entered and arrested the offender, who gave his name as Frank W. Mattes. He gave as a reason for his discharge of firearms that he took both Metz and the policeman for highway robbers.
