

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION. Daily Bee (without Sunday) One Year, $6.00...

OFFICE. Omaha: The Bee Building, South Omaha, City Hall Building, Twenty-fifth and N. streets.

CORRESPONDENCE. Communications relating to news and editorial matters should be addressed to The Bee Publishing Company, Omaha.

BUSINESS LETTERS. Business letters and remittances should be addressed to The Bee Publishing Company, Omaha.

REMITTANCES. Remit by draft, express or postal order, payable to The Bee Publishing Company.

STATEMENT OF CIRCULATION. State of Nebraska, Douglas County, ss: George B. Tschick, secretary of The Bee Publishing Company, being duly sworn...

Table with 3 columns: Number of copies, Total, and Less unsold and returned copies. Shows circulation figures for various months and years.

The government of Venezuela indignantly denies a revolution is in progress in that country—they are simply settling an election squabble in a Kentucky.

The electric motor line from Omaha to Kansas City is still slightly remote. We expect to see one operated between Omaha and Fremont a few years sooner.

"My Dear Mr. Bryan: I am too busy assimilating my partners in the steel business at present to make any contribution to the democratic campaign fund."

A Chicago dentist paralyzed the jaw of an opera singer while extracting a tooth. The public will be immensely relieved if he will try his hand next on the professional pugilists.

Lord Roberts made a base hit his first time up at bat and French advanced him one, while Kitz-bender is expected to bring him to home plate. It is not an easy matter to place a safe drive when the Boers are doing such sharp fielding.

The fusionist members of the populist national committee put in the day placing obstructions in the middle of the road. Should they succeed in blocking the highway it will yet be another thing to compel the voters to travel the fusion topham.

TURN IN THE WAR TIDE.

Although the advisers from South Africa are exceedingly meager they indicate a turn in the war tide and seem to show some real generalship on the part of the British, a condition that, judging by results, has been conspicuously lacking.

At all events, one thing can be confidently said and that is that the war is yet in its first stage and that much heavy fighting and destruction of life are beyond. The British now have a force of upwards of 200,000 men in South Africa and more troops are to be sent there.

It is probable that the senate will not consider the Frye-Payne shipping bill at the present session, whatever the house may do.

The decision of Judge Estelle will therefore make it incumbent upon the political conventions to pledge candidates for the legislature to re-enact the law without flaws or defects and to reduce the salary of the clerk to $2,500 a year.

In its anxiety to defeat the republican city ticket the organ of the defuncto candidate for U. S. S. expresses its abhorrence of the awful deal by which A. H. Hennings secured the nomination for city treasurer.

Senator Hear is the leader of the opposition to the Philippine policy of the government, but he does not think that if the party in power will not desert from this policy the people should place the control of national affairs in the hands of the popocratic party.

The people who are willing all these things should happen rather than that the policy of so-called imperialism shall prevail are told by Senator Hear that it is not the question whether Bryanism or imperialism be the worse for the American people.

Having pointed out that Bryan is in large measure responsible for the ratification of the treaty of Paris, which created the existing situation, and expressed the opinion that he did this for the purpose of keeping the question open as an issue for the campaign, Senator Hear proceeds to show that if elected president Bryan could do little or nothing in regard to the policy in the Philippines.

A decided divergence of opinion seems to prevail among the boarders at the county jail upon the question whether the diet is sufficient for their epicurean

Philippines. Consequently Mr. Bryan as president, even with the support of a house of representatives, could not undo what the present shall enact.

At the beginning of the century the per capita of money in circulation in this country was $4.90. In 1890 it was $13.85 and is now $25.98.

At all events, one thing can be confidently said and that is that the war is yet in its first stage and that much heavy fighting and destruction of life are beyond.

It is probable that the senate will not consider the Frye-Payne shipping bill at the present session, whatever the house may do.

The decision of Judge Estelle will therefore make it incumbent upon the political conventions to pledge candidates for the legislature to re-enact the law without flaws or defects and to reduce the salary of the clerk to $2,500 a year.

In its anxiety to defeat the republican city ticket the organ of the defuncto candidate for U. S. S. expresses its abhorrence of the awful deal by which A. H. Hennings secured the nomination for city treasurer.

Senator Hear is the leader of the opposition to the Philippine policy of the government, but he does not think that if the party in power will not desert from this policy the people should place the control of national affairs in the hands of the popocratic party.

The people who are willing all these things should happen rather than that the policy of so-called imperialism shall prevail are told by Senator Hear that it is not the question whether Bryanism or imperialism be the worse for the American people.

Having pointed out that Bryan is in large measure responsible for the ratification of the treaty of Paris, which created the existing situation, and expressed the opinion that he did this for the purpose of keeping the question open as an issue for the campaign, Senator Hear proceeds to show that if elected president Bryan could do little or nothing in regard to the policy in the Philippines.

A decided divergence of opinion seems to prevail among the boarders at the county jail upon the question whether the diet is sufficient for their epicurean

Philippines. Consequently Mr. Bryan as president, even with the support of a house of representatives, could not undo what the present shall enact.

At the beginning of the century the per capita of money in circulation in this country was $4.90. In 1890 it was $13.85 and is now $25.98.

At all events, one thing can be confidently said and that is that the war is yet in its first stage and that much heavy fighting and destruction of life are beyond.

It is probable that the senate will not consider the Frye-Payne shipping bill at the present session, whatever the house may do.

The decision of Judge Estelle will therefore make it incumbent upon the political conventions to pledge candidates for the legislature to re-enact the law without flaws or defects and to reduce the salary of the clerk to $2,500 a year.

In its anxiety to defeat the republican city ticket the organ of the defuncto candidate for U. S. S. expresses its abhorrence of the awful deal by which A. H. Hennings secured the nomination for city treasurer.

Senator Hear is the leader of the opposition to the Philippine policy of the government, but he does not think that if the party in power will not desert from this policy the people should place the control of national affairs in the hands of the popocratic party.

The people who are willing all these things should happen rather than that the policy of so-called imperialism shall prevail are told by Senator Hear that it is not the question whether Bryanism or imperialism be the worse for the American people.

Having pointed out that Bryan is in large measure responsible for the ratification of the treaty of Paris, which created the existing situation, and expressed the opinion that he did this for the purpose of keeping the question open as an issue for the campaign, Senator Hear proceeds to show that if elected president Bryan could do little or nothing in regard to the policy in the Philippines.

A decided divergence of opinion seems to prevail among the boarders at the county jail upon the question whether the diet is sufficient for their epicurean

Philippines. Consequently Mr. Bryan as president, even with the support of a house of representatives, could not undo what the present shall enact.

At the beginning of the century the per capita of money in circulation in this country was $4.90. In 1890 it was $13.85 and is now $25.98.

At all events, one thing can be confidently said and that is that the war is yet in its first stage and that much heavy fighting and destruction of life are beyond.

It is probable that the senate will not consider the Frye-Payne shipping bill at the present session, whatever the house may do.

The decision of Judge Estelle will therefore make it incumbent upon the political conventions to pledge candidates for the legislature to re-enact the law without flaws or defects and to reduce the salary of the clerk to $2,500 a year.

In its anxiety to defeat the republican city ticket the organ of the defuncto candidate for U. S. S. expresses its abhorrence of the awful deal by which A. H. Hennings secured the nomination for city treasurer.

Senator Hear is the leader of the opposition to the Philippine policy of the government, but he does not think that if the party in power will not desert from this policy the people should place the control of national affairs in the hands of the popocratic party.

The people who are willing all these things should happen rather than that the policy of so-called imperialism shall prevail are told by Senator Hear that it is not the question whether Bryanism or imperialism be the worse for the American people.

Having pointed out that Bryan is in large measure responsible for the ratification of the treaty of Paris, which created the existing situation, and expressed the opinion that he did this for the purpose of keeping the question open as an issue for the campaign, Senator Hear proceeds to show that if elected president Bryan could do little or nothing in regard to the policy in the Philippines.

A decided divergence of opinion seems to prevail among the boarders at the county jail upon the question whether the diet is sufficient for their epicurean

Philippines. Consequently Mr. Bryan as president, even with the support of a house of representatives, could not undo what the present shall enact.

At the beginning of the century the per capita of money in circulation in this country was $4.90. In 1890 it was $13.85 and is now $25.98.

At all events, one thing can be confidently said and that is that the war is yet in its first stage and that much heavy fighting and destruction of life are beyond.

It is probable that the senate will not consider the Frye-Payne shipping bill at the present session, whatever the house may do.

The decision of Judge Estelle will therefore make it incumbent upon the political conventions to pledge candidates for the legislature to re-enact the law without flaws or defects and to reduce the salary of the clerk to $2,500 a year.

In its anxiety to defeat the republican city ticket the organ of the defuncto candidate for U. S. S. expresses its abhorrence of the awful deal by which A. H. Hennings secured the nomination for city treasurer.

Senator Hear is the leader of the opposition to the Philippine policy of the government, but he does not think that if the party in power will not desert from this policy the people should place the control of national affairs in the hands of the popocratic party.

The people who are willing all these things should happen rather than that the policy of so-called imperialism shall prevail are told by Senator Hear that it is not the question whether Bryanism or imperialism be the worse for the American people.

Having pointed out that Bryan is in large measure responsible for the ratification of the treaty of Paris, which created the existing situation, and expressed the opinion that he did this for the purpose of keeping the question open as an issue for the campaign, Senator Hear proceeds to show that if elected president Bryan could do little or nothing in regard to the policy in the Philippines.

A decided divergence of opinion seems to prevail among the boarders at the county jail upon the question whether the diet is sufficient for their epicurean

Philippines. Consequently Mr. Bryan as president, even with the support of a house of representatives, could not undo what the present shall enact.

At the beginning of the century the per capita of money in circulation in this country was $4.90. In 1890 it was $13.85 and is now $25.98.

At all events, one thing can be confidently said and that is that the war is yet in its first stage and that much heavy fighting and destruction of life are beyond.

It is probable that the senate will not consider the Frye-Payne shipping bill at the present session, whatever the house may do.

The decision of Judge Estelle will therefore make it incumbent upon the political conventions to pledge candidates for the legislature to re-enact the law without flaws or defects and to reduce the salary of the clerk to $2,500 a year.

In its anxiety to defeat the republican city ticket the organ of the defuncto candidate for U. S. S. expresses its abhorrence of the awful deal by which A. H. Hennings secured the nomination for city treasurer.

Senator Hear is the leader of the opposition to the Philippine policy of the government, but he does not think that if the party in power will not desert from this policy the people should place the control of national affairs in the hands of the popocratic party.

The people who are willing all these things should happen rather than that the policy of so-called imperialism shall prevail are told by Senator Hear that it is not the question whether Bryanism or imperialism be the worse for the American people.

Having pointed out that Bryan is in large measure responsible for the ratification of the treaty of Paris, which created the existing situation, and expressed the opinion that he did this for the purpose of keeping the question open as an issue for the campaign, Senator Hear proceeds to show that if elected president Bryan could do little or nothing in regard to the policy in the Philippines.

A decided divergence of opinion seems to prevail among the boarders at the county jail upon the question whether the diet is sufficient for their epicurean