Private Paul Pugh was but a boy when he enlisted, having but recently left the High school of this city, and the two companies of the cadets under their respective captains were present to pay their tribute to their former comrade.

The church itself was beautifully draped with the national colors, while the casket as t reposed near the chancel was completely covered with the many handsome floral offerings. Conspicuous among the many beautiful floral tributes was the one significant of the Eighth army corps, the gift of the dead soldier boy's former comrades in arms. Other set pieces were offerings from the Men's club of the church, of which the boy had been a member, and the Christian Endeavor society. The cadets were represented also by a magnificent set piece.

The pastor, Rev. J. W. Wilson, in his address paid a most touching tribute to the dead soldier and his remarks left hardly a dry eye in the audience. The music was furnished by Mrs. Sherman, Miss Worley, Ned Mitchell and Howard F. Stryker.

The Dubuque Times says that Congressman Herburn should know better than to introduce a bill prohibiting the transmission through the mails of newspapers which contain accounts of prize fights.

The selection of Congressman Cousins as temporary chairman of the republican convention in the opinion of the Des Moines Capitol was a good move. His speech can be depended upon to make a worthy keynote for the campaign.

The Davenbort Times is of the opinion that if there had been a pressing demand for an ideal Christian daily, which would subordinate the real to the spiritual, the want would have been applied before this closing year of the nineteeenth century.

The Iowa City Republican, discussing the medical bill before the legislature, says: "That when a man is suffering from what he knows to be an old-fashfoned case of bellyache he should be allowed to go to his mother, or any other old woman for a remedy without rendering himself and the woman liable for practicing medicine without a diploma."
