GREINA CITIZENS PITY FIGG

Deprecate the Tar and Feather Tactics of the Mob.
WORK OF GANG IS DECLARED BARBAROUS
Sudden Reversal of Sentiment in Favor of the Religious Fanatic, Who is Thought to be Right at Heart.

A half-naked boy ran through the streets of Greina at midnight Wednesday last shouting: "They are burning my mother! The mob has got her!"
Those who heard the cry and saw the boy recognized him as Ira Figg, young son of Louis Figg, a religious fanatic and founder of a creed all his own. And then they knew that "public sentiment" so long crystallized in the neighborhood, had at last crystallized into action. They knew that the senior Figgs were victims of mob violence. Feeling has long been bitter against the leaders of this cult, principally because several women had left their homes to dwell in the house of Figg. It was asserted that he exercised an unholy influence over the gentle sex. Some said he maintained a harem, recruited from time to time from the households of farmers in the vicinity, and that religion was but a cloak. These reports, however, are denied by all reputable citizens and by all who are in a position to know the facts.
The Figgs are fanatics—granted—but the more charitable of their arbiters seek the idea of immorality. They see sights and hear sounds not vouchsafed ordinary mortals.

They receive messages from heaven. They see personal devils—beelzebubs in the flesh—and their religious rites are noisy, graceful and troublesome, but fair-minded people do not believe them to be moved by mammon, but away alone by the tenets of their faith.
As to the motives which impel women to desert their husbands to live in Figg's house, reports are conflicting. Some say they had become unbalanced mentally by reason of his fetish creed; others assign an entirely different reason. It is certain that in one case a woman sought an asylum with Figg's family because of unseemable abuses in her own home.
Four of the five women who lived there are members of one household—a mother and her three grown daughters.

The story of the Figg haing, wherein tar and feathers were freely used, was told in the press last week and the public is familiar with it. Since then there has been a decided revision of local sentiment. The Figgs were not popular in Greina, but the spectacle of a mob of fourteen masked men dragging a poor, frail woman—sickly, decrepit and half blind—down a flight of steps to pour hot tar upon her is not edifying. Her husband, 50 years old and in feeble health, had sheltered women not of his family, but when the mob choked and kicked him the tide of public emotion turned backward and left them without moral support.
The Figgs have returned to their dismantled home and it is not likely that they will soon be molested again. There they will hold their religious services every Sunday as formerly. The five women have gone, but Mr. and Mrs. Figg say that if they care to return they will find a refuge there as before.
Louis Figg, founder of Figgism, has lived in what is now Greina for sixteen

POPULAR BOND ISSUE FAILS

Small Investors Spurn the Insignificant Interest Rate Offered.
ONLY ONE SUBSCRIBER MAKES AN OFFER
Omaha Citizens Prefer to Put Their Savings Into Securities Bringing Larger Returns—Eastern Purchasers Stand in Waiting.

The experiment with a popular bond issue now being indulged in by the city authorities will probably prove an unqualified failure. The bonds will be offered for sale on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in denominations of $50 each, no purchaser being allowed to acquire more than ten bonds. Although the advertisement of the issue has been inserted in the newspapers since the first week in March, the city treasurer has received only one proposal, that of T. E. Price, 2864 Ohio street, who desires to go the limit and acquire $500 worth of the bonds. As the total issue amounts to $25,000, the treasurer realizes that it is useless to attempt to dispose of it by popular subscriptions. The issue is regarded as a stock of state goods.
The bonds with which the experiment is being made are for paving street intersections not taxable to adjoining property and were voted in November, 1898. They have not previously been disposed of as no need has existed for the funds. In the original bond ordinance there was no provision that the issue should be restricted to denominations of $50. That scheme was only conceived one month ago by Commissioner Loebek, who embodied it in an ordinance. It

WAS RELIEVED BY THE PORTER

Witty Excuse Given by Passenger on Train that Was Held Up Saved Him His Valuables.
The recent hold-up of the Kansas City train on the Burlington was productive of a rare bit of humor at the expense of the oft-abused sleeping car porter. It is said, too, that the lone robber who accomplished the hold-up appreciated the bit of levity so much that the author was permitted to go unmolested and his wit and presence of mind were of more service to him in that case than was the position of president of the Union Pacific to H. G. Burt, who was relieved of all his possessions.

A man, slightly inebriated, boarded the train at Nebraska City and had a ticket for Kansas City. He had retired to his berth some time before the robber put in an appearance. When the bandit reached the berth in which this man was soundly sleeping he roughly shook him and demanded that he "wake up and dig up."
"Whash th' matter," sleepily inquired the traveler, who did not appreciate that he was the victim of a hold-up.
"Never mind what's the matter," replied the robber, "get up here and shell out what money you've got."
"Ain't got any money left. The porter was here just a few minutes ago."
"This colloquy was heard by the other passengers in the sleeper and added a little humor to an otherwise grave situation. It is reported that a smile was noticed to play over the features of the masked highwayman—being discernible even through the mask—and he passed by the porter's victim without further disturbing him.

In the third case the circuit court affirmed the judgment of the Life Insurance company the sum of $8,841.53 on a judgment secured in the circuit court in this city.
