

URN OR GRAVE FOR DEAD

Dr. Stone Shows Sentimental and Sanitary Value of Cremation.

EARTH-BURIAL BREEDS DANGER TO LIVING

Pestilence Has Arisen from Infection of Bodies Long Since Dead—No Basis Exists for Any Religious Objection.

At the Unity church Sunday morning Robert Mersena Stone, M. D., of this city lectured upon the process of cremating the dead from both a sanitary and sentimental point of view.

A study of the customs of civilized nations of old and many past generations," said Dr. Stone, "shows that we have blindly accepted one custom and followed it for indefinite years without much question. It is that of the disposition of our dead.

"This particular study and address is due to a discussion of the general question of the disposition of the dead apart from any personal interest which arises from a query presented: 'Is it best that we bury our dead?'

"And still another question is put, and to the physician this is the hardest of all: 'Do the living suffer harm by reason of the almost universal custom of earth burial?'

"One of the noblest sentiments, the possession of which is characteristic of the civilized nations of the world, is that of a reverence for the dead, which impels us to honor them after death, to erect monuments to perpetuate their memory and to regard as holy and sacred the particular spot selected for the last resting place of one's own dead.

"I am firmly convinced that this substitution of sentiment from the grave to the urn, this recognition that the will with its ashes remains its home, and will sooner or later be accepted and will result in the transfer of our holy regard from the grave to the urn, also, beautified with constantly changed flowers and result in the adoption of cremation by thinking, cultured people of all communities.

"During all the ages all cities have had the same experience. Burial spots have been chosen when the population was small, in a district not far removed from the city. The population has increased, the city has at last reached beyond the plot beyond the cemetery, which has become full to overflowing, is no longer a pleasant and desirable spot, and is abandoned; those interested in its preservation have died and no one longer cares for it.

"Pasture showed that earth worms had carried to the surface, twelve years after death, of an animal from splenic fever, the germs of the fever which brought about the new outbreak of the disease. Prof. Selmi, the great Italian, proved that the common constituents of the body, brain, blood and fibrin, are converted by decomposition into most virulent poisons. Prof. de Rio Janeiro proved that the soil of the cemeteries in which yellow fever victims had been interred teemed with micro-organisms identical with those found in the vomit and blood of yellow fever victims.

"The religious objection was at first very pronounced. Many of the clergy called cremation irreligious, heathenish and pagan. Such objections are no longer heard. On the contrary, most eminent religious men are now the strongest advocates of the practice. The bishop of Lincoln has said: 'Only weak-minded brethren might have their belief shaken in the doctrine of the resurrection.' Lord Shaftesbury said: 'What an audacious limitation of the power of the Almighty! What has become of the blessed martyrs who were burned at the stake?'

Carl Negation, a blacksmith, whose shop and residence are at 15th and Locust streets, has given a practical demonstration of what persistent industry will accomplish. Working at odd moments—time that is devoted to frivolous pursuits by less worthy men—this blacksmith has constructed a pleasure launch on Cut Off lake. Recognizing the beauty of that body of water, the resourceful blacksmith conceived the idea that a pleasure boat of modern design would be a profitable investment and indications are that his judgment is sound.

"A Hot Old Time"— At Boyd's theater the Sunday attraction was the farce comedy by the above name, in which the Rays have won more or less fame and fortune, although it was not presented by them on this occasion. The Rays were seen here in the piece a season or two ago, and the impression made by them was not altogether favorable one. This year the company touring this section of the country with the play is far superior to the one headed by Johnny and Emma Ray.
