TENANTS BUILD PARTITION

Sounds of Revelry by Night Awake Them from Their Slumbers and Make a Scandal.

Across the veranda of a certain flat or west Douglas street has been built within the last few days a partition, neatly paneled and painted to make it look like a part of the building. This partition was not included in the plans of the architect, however. It was erected at the behest of the tenants of two of the three attached flats and stands today a monument commemorating an event of a week ago which scandalized the neighborhood.

Saturday night the landlady of the east flat, accompanied by one of her young woman roomers, went down town to look at goods displayed in the store windows. There, by accident or design, they fell in with a commercial traveler.

Five hours later the trio ensconsed in rubber-tired back stopped in front of the hitherto eminently respectable flat, and neighbors for a half block in either direction thrust heads from windows to lister to their revels, for the voices of the trio were not rubber-tired. Each was singing steady procession up the front steps, a struggle with a latchkey, and the three disappeared within.

What happened after that is not known 5 definitely. As a result, however, all the roomers of the east flat have left, and the occupants of the middle and west flats have caused a partition to be built that is a Chinese wall against the Philistines.

Wants His Dog Protected.

Wants His Dog Protected.

An irate young man, carrying a tin can tied to a stout cord, walked into the police station Thursday evening and in a voice trembling with deep indignation, demanded the arrest of a worthless rufflan who had been so cruel as to fasten the implement of torture to the tail of his pet setter and chase the canine down the street. He had paid the taxes on his dog and he proposed to have him protected and if the police refused to make the arrest he would arm himself with a brick and wreak vengeance upon the disturber of the dog's peace. The young man was directed to swear out a complaint in police court, being careful to retain the can as evidence, and was assured that the police force would do the rest.

BOILS & CARBUNCLES

condition of the blood and a debilitated state of health

Carbuncles are much more serious, eating great holes in the flesh, making slow-healing, dangerous wounds.

Boils are regarded by many as of little importance—something rather to be desired as a means of thinning the blood; but this is an erroneous idea, 22 offensive chronic sores and ulcers, and even Cancer, often begin with a Boil.

The seat of the trouble is in the blood—to be rid of these pests permanently
