LAUGHING MATTERS.

Chicago Record: "How queer, Edgar, food is higher and dry goods are not." "Well, we'll fix that, Eliza; we'll eat less and buy clothes."

New York Weekly: Husband-What! No has been keeping the refrigerator open all day to cool off the kitchen.

Detroit Free Press: Caller-I want to see the head of the family. Husband-You can't. It put on its bonnet awhile ago and went out.

Indianapolis Journal: "What ails Mrs. I don't know what her oculist says, but I think she has injured them squinting through her window blinds to see what is going on in the neighborhood."

Washington Star: "I suppose you feel sure of your ground in the coming campaign?" "I should say so." answered Senator Sor-ghum. "I think I may say without boast-ing that I have enough laid by to held my own without mortgaging any real estate."

Cleveland Leader: "Did you ever long for the touch of a vanished hand?" "None, I'm touched too often by present hands." Pittsburg Chronicle: "There is great discord in China." said the Horse Editor. "There is," added the Snake Editor, "the IA Yamen cannot pretend that life is one glad, sweet Tsung."

Philadelphia Press: The Transvaal was now pacified and prospectors for gold were overrunning the country. "This," said one, tapping the rock with s hammer, "seems to be a species of "Ah" exclaimed his partner, "are there any signs of British soldiers in it?"

MURMURS OF THE SEASON.

Somerville Journal Again the mercury goes up.

It's hot'
Men sigh and call for claret cup.
It's hot'
The summer girl alone is cool.
Through arts acquired in Fashion's school.
And seems regardless, as a rule.
That it is hot.

The leaves hang lifeless on the trees, They long for a refreshing breeze, Men walk around with hats in hand. And walstcoats all unbuttoned, and Make warm remarks to beat the band, Because it's hot.

The lemonade man's getting rich, it's hot! The seamstress sighs at every stitch,
It's hot!
But keep at work, persistent, slow.
Don't fume and fret to make things go,
And you will find you'll hardly know
That it is hot.

Wiggly Eyeglasses

Mean wiggly vision. No eyeglass frame can be rigid through long use with the old style of stud screws. Turn the screws around, head for point, and they are "Lenslocked"-fast as if cast solid

The good of it is more than the pleasure of it. Helpful to the eyes as well as to the temper. "L" on the stud is the trade mark.
