J.dgs Smith held that the new company had a right under its franchise to these streets and that the old company had not the exclusive right to them. He held further that the new company in laying its tracks had the right to "straddle" the rails of the old company.

The old company at once took the case up on appeal and secured the temporary restraining order pending the final determination by the supreme court of the suit. As it may be a long time before the case is reached by the supreme court the restraining order will prevent the new company from building its loop, as intended, around Broadway, Pearl and Main

IOWA CITY, Ia., June 27 .- (Special.)-The executive committee of the Board of Regents met here yesterday with Mr. Neiler, the expert engineer of Pierce, Richardson & Neller of Chicago, and developed plans and specifications for a new steam-heating plant. The plant will be so constructed that by means of it all the buildings, laboratories and hospitals, on both campuses, can be heated by it. It will be designed to furnish all the heat, light and electrical power needed by the university for heating, lighting and ventilating. The completion of the building, with all modern systems of heating apparatuses and brick tunnels, will cost about $15,000. The plans will be let by Proudfoot & Bird of Des Moines and be open until 10

ACTION OF LABOR UNIONS

Brickingers and Stonemasons Withdraw from the Chicago Building Trades Council. CHICAGO, June 27.—Before morning it is xpected all the formalities connected with he withdrawal of the Bricklayers' and Stonenasons' union from the Building Trades ouncil and the making of a working agreement between the men and the Masons' and Builders' association will be completed. The agreement providing for a scale of ages and other matters was drawn up luring the day and, it is declared, will be signed by both parties tonight. The belief that this action is the beginning of the end of the Building Trades council and consequently the long industrial war is held by many interested in building operations. On the other hand, officers of the Building Trades council and officers of the individual unions composing that council declare that the fight will go on. The Building Trades council, they declare emphatically will never be dissolved.

Vote early and often.
