GOLF AND THINGS TO EAT COMPONENTS

List of Fashionable Folk Returning from Summer Outlings is Beginning to Compare in Number with Those Going Away.

A unique institution has recently come into vogue among the smart set that it is pleased to call a "Philadelphia treat." Just why this particular kind of treat should be named for the Quaker city, society does not seem to know; possibly for the same reason that one speaks of Dutch treats and French spreads but, be that as it may, the Philadelphia treat is by far the most popular diversion that society has at present. Even golf cannot be excepted in this case, but that is only because it is a part of the treat and it is in this very respect that the Philadelphia variety has its immense advantage over all others.

A man or woman, as the case may be, suggests to a friend or a half dozen friends that they all go out to the Country club some afternoon and have a game of golf with the additional proposal that all will lunch together when the game is over. Of course this suggestion usually meets with general approval and they go the rounds of Then they have dinner, lunch or lemonade or sit on the veranda and order mixtures of all sorts of harmless things and talk and-when they get ready-go home. It is doubtless the utter lack of formality that has made this kind of afternoon so popular.

"Oh dear," said a charming debutant the other day, a member of one of these parties that had sat for some time without saying a word. "Aren't you all sorry that we will have to stop this sort of thing so

Beauty and the bath have ever been closely associated. In every age of the world and among nearly all peoples the virtues of the bath have been admitted without argument. The baths of ancient Rome have been celebrated in song and story, the Hindoo still bathee in his sacred river and the New Zealander renews his youth in a fountain of hot mud. Even the Indian at times takes a primitive bath of steam by wrapping himself and his blanket about a puddle of water into which he pushes hot stones. The Turkish bath is familiar to all; the American goes to the hot springs for health and the seaside for pleasure, and the Englishman cannot exist without his morning tub. If the Chinaman bathes at all he does it result to himself, but the one fact is everywhere evident that proper bathing is conducive to health, beauty and long life Upon this well grounded theory the New Renstrom Bath Co. has combined the best from many different plans, and the result of nuch experiment, covering a period of sev ral years, has been more than satisfactory almost marvelous, in fact. The Renstrom system is a virtual restorer of youth. The mode of operation is entirely new and the appliances novel and complex. President HOWARD H BALDRIGE

First Vice President R W RICHARDSON
Second Vice President R B CARTER
Third Vice President THEODORE JOHNSON
Secretary PAUL SEWARD
Treasurer GEORGE HEIMROD

All of these officers were elected without competition by practically unanimous vote. The meeting was called and presided over in Washington hall by Chairman Collins of the republican county committee, who de scribed the preliminary steps and explained the purposes of the club, whose constitution and by-laws had been ratified by almost all the various republican clubs of the county through their respective presidents. Clyde C. Sunblad, acting as secretary, read the constitution, to which the following club signatures were attached by their presiding officers: First Ward Republican club, by Sam cott, president. First Ward Bohemian Republican club, by George Nelson was overcome with the heat Friday while working in one of the ice houses, falling and injuring himself quite badly.

The plan of organization provides for a central county club made up of the regular officers of the various established ward clubs, together with the chairmen of the republican county, city, judicial and congressional committees and the members of the county committee, vested with the management of the campaign in this city and O county. This club is to co-operate in the work of the county committee to the extent of relieving it of what Chairman Collins referred to as the "hurrah" part of the campaign with respect to the reception and entertainment of speakers, arrangements for meetings, parades and celebrations. Everything in the nature of factional contention is strictly barred and express prohibition laid on the discussion or endorsement of any O candidate for office.

Some vociferous opposition to the organization of the club was manifested by representatives of three or four clubs who had failed to ratify the constitution and who protested against the election of officers under its provisions. They found themselves in such a hopeless minority, however, that they speedily subsided. The club adjourned to meet at the call of the president, when he will announce ap-

WASHINGTON, July 28.-The president has promulgated an order drafted by the marine hospital service, establishing a national quarantine against Cape Nome and Dutch Harbor, Alaska, on account of the epidemic at those points. This order gives a legal status to the quarantine already in operation and also gives effect to the preautionary measures that have been taken against inspection from returning vessels when the exodus from that district begins. Surgeon General Wymah today sent a telegram via the United States revenue cutter McCulloch, notifying the surgeons at those points of the formal action and directing for circular or apply personally to Mrs. L. strict enforcement.
