the conversation he said:
"While I was down there I remembered my friends and have brought back with me some elegant specimens of the manume some elegant specimens of the mar drawn work cannot be purchased in the United States at any price,' he said, showing an exquisite specimen, but what I pride myself on is this zarepa,' and he exhibited one of the Mexican blankets. " 'This cost $50 in gold in Mexico and the tariff on it would have been as much more, but I paid no tariff upon any of my purchases in Mexico. A complaisant baggageman stored the zarepa in a box of canned goods, while I concealed the drawn work about my person, just as I did a lot of these cigars,' and he offered me one of the aromatic rolls of tobacco. "Right then I thought that a man worth over $2,000,000 should not beat the government and I was tempted to show him my commission as an officer of the Treasury department. I resisted the temptation, however, but when I reached Salt Lake wired the department at Washington and my acquainance of the rail by this time may be learning that it is not always safe
