

BURGLAR ALARM SAVES COINS

Attempt Made to Loot Byron Reed Collection at Public Library.

THIEF CAME VERY NEAR SUCCEEDING

Police Find Complete Kit of Criminal's Tools in His Possession and Think They Have an Expert Worker.

A burglar was caught in the act of trying to loot a case of rare coins in the Byron Reed collection at the public library yesterday forenoon. He succeeded in passing the bolt of a lock about half through, and in five minutes more the contents of the case, valued at $5,000 would doubtless have been in his possession.

At the police station the man gave the name of Frank Howe. He is a stranger to the police, but from the fact that several fine saws and a good pair of burglars' tools were found on his person it is inferred that he is a dangerous criminal and that he is wanted for crimes committed elsewhere.

The apprehension of Howe was the result of a system of burglar alarms in the public library building. An electric circuit "short circuited" in any of the various rooms of the institution will cause a bell to ring on the desk of the attendant and will also sound an alarm at fire and police central station.

Another hint in his favor was that the room at this hour (10:30 a. m.) was almost entirely deserted. An old man stood in a remote corner consulting the 1862 files of the Philadelphia Press; the attendant sat at her desk buried in a book. There was little danger of interruption.

No one noticed Howe as he entered. Climbing the stairs to the second floor, he stepped noiselessly into the room on the northeast corner, which is devoted exclusively to the Byron Reed collection of coins, old newspapers and curiosities.

Shelters Himself Behind Cabinets. A moment later he had disappeared in the extreme northeast corner of the apartment where several high cabinets intervened between him and the attendant.

At this point is a case containing some of the most highly prized coins—gold, silver and bronze—in the entire collection. Many of them are of recent date and could be passed today for their face value.

The would-be burglar, preparatory to the work in hand, placed a large sheet of paper flat upon the desk and opened it. This served a double purpose. The edge of the sheet extended about six inches over the desk, thereby hiding his hands while he was busy with the lock underneath.

Surprised at his work, he looked down and had been deeply engrossed in reading from the file. The room was quiet, but the fine steel saw that he introduced into the crack between the lid and the body of the case made a sound barely louder than the buzz of a mosquito.

The bell rang on the desk of the attendant. At the same instant the gong sounded at the telephone station. Central called up police headquarters and said that something was wrong at the public library.

The desk sergeant in turn rang up the public library and asked what was amiss. Meanwhile the attendant in the Byron Reed room had gone the rounds of her domain on a tour of inspection, but saw only an old man reading a book and a blonde gentleman over in the corner engrossed in a bound volume of the Broken Bow Advocate.

Again the gongs clanged, and this time a general inspection was inaugurated. Special Officer Samuelson was sent for. He reasoned that one of the two men in the Byron Reed museum was in mischief; the old man was out of the question, as nothing of value was near him, so it must be the blonde man in the corner. The blonde man was arrested.

The big bound newspaper file removed from the case, Samuelson had proof that he'd made no mistake. On the plush lining of the interior was a teaspoonful of blue sand and iron filings.

CARRIERS GOING TO DETROIT

Men Who Manipulate Mail to Make Merry in Michigan's Metropolis.

The delegates from the Omaha Letter Carriers' association to the national convention will leave Saturday evening for Detroit, Mich., where the convention will be held September 4. The delegation is composed of Fred Jorgensen, Henry Lehmann and N. Lundberg.

Detroit is making active preparations for the entertainment of the visiting delegations. September 3 is Labor Day, and it will be made memorable in the Michigan city by one of the largest parades of letter carriers ever held in the United States.

The business of the convention will principally relate to the status of the carriers under the laws of the country, and an attempt will be made to decide upon some plan which will insure the passage of a bill readjusting the wages of the carriers. The matter of affiliation with the American Federation of Labor will be decided.

One of the most important measures to be considered is that looking toward a law granting a pension to letter carriers who are retired from the service because of old age or injuries received in the line of duty.

HARSHA'S SUCCESSOR CHOSEN

Dr. Daniel E. Jenkins Elected Professor of Theology in the Omaha Seminary.

Dr. Daniel E. Jenkins, former president of Parsons college at Fairfield, Ia., has been elected professor of theology in the Presbyterian Theological seminary to fill the chair formerly held by Dr. W. W. Harsha.

He has notified the trustees of the seminary that he will accept the position and is expected in Omaha in a few days. Although a young man, Dr. Jenkins is a prominent educator. Four years ago he accepted the presidency of Parsons college, one of the best known Presbyterian colleges in the west, and proved to be a very capable executive.

Previous to coming to Iowa Dr. Jenkins preached in Pennsylvania. He received his theological training at Princeton seminary. The presidency of McAllister college, located midway between Minneapolis and St. Paul, was offered to Dr. Jenkins and he was about to accept that position when the trustees of the Omaha seminary asked him to come here.

He prefers teaching to the work required of a college president and immediately accepted the Omaha position.

Inventor of a Patent Corn Husker May Decide to Locate His Works in Omaha.

Considerable interest is being taken by some of the progressive business and implement men of Omaha in a project to secure the establishment here of a factory for the manufacture of a patent corn husker.

There is a gentleman now in Omaha who claims to have invented a machine which can be drawn through a cornfield, gathering and husking an acre of corn an hour. Some of his machines have been manufactured and are in operation, but not, it seems, within the corn belt.
