UNIVERSITY AT THE FAIR

Educational Exhibit that is a Great Feature of the Show.

GRAINS AND GRASSES OF NEBRASKA

Ocular Evidence of the Adaptability of Many Varieties Shown and Assistance of the Experiment Station Made Plain.

LINCOLN, Sept. 5.—(Special.)—The branches of the University of Nebraska the Agricultural Experiment station, the School of Agriculture and the Farmers' institutes-are represented at the state fair by exhibits which are designed to be of considerable educational value, all comprising one distinct class and occupying an entire building. Director T. L. Lyon of the United States Experiment station is in charge of the display and is assisted by a corps of about twenty university attaches. Since the fair opened the building has been one of the chief centers of interest. Beginning at the east entrance the visitor is first shown the processes involved in the preparation of the anti-toxin serum used in the treatment of hog cholera, which was first put in use by the Nebraska Experiment station and afterward recognized by the United States Department of Agriculture as a practical and efficient remedy for the most disastrous of all swine diseases. This treatment was inaugurated by Dr. A. T. Peters, head of the Department of Animal Pathology at the experiment station. During the last year over 7,000 hogs have been treated with this serum and about 80 per cent were saved. In connection is an exhibit showing the methods used in fighting blackleg in cattle. An interesting feature is a collection of horseshoes showing the various shapes and modifica-tion of shoe used for correcting defects in Madcap the foot of the horse. In a nearby case is a collection of 500 different families of plants, representing all varieties of an ecnomic value, both good and bad, that are common to Nebraska soil. Of interest to sheepmen is an extensive collection of the various grades of wool raised or imported to this country. On the walls are hung a set of charts showing different types of beef and dairy cattle, hogs and BRAKEMAN RUN DOWN AND KILLED. sheep. These diagrams are used for the instruction of methods used in judging live stock. The rapid method of determining butter fat in milk, which is done by means of a special milk tester, may also be agen in operation. By analyses of this kind much information may be obtained concerning the fertility and productive qualities of any soil. The chemical constituents of soil have been insulated in glass tubes. Sugar beet analyses are conducted daily.

A history of each of these accompanies the sample, making an extremely interesting collection. Several grains from Russia have been found to be particularly well adapted to the semi-arid region of this country. These grains have been grown for genera-tions under climatic conditions very similar to those which obtain in the drier regions f this country and we have been able to grains of this kind which have been grown on the experiment station farm are arranged in the sheaf, each variety being labeled. Of the very large number of winter wheats tested at the experiment station, quite a number may be seen arranged in the sheaf along the wall of the building. At this time, when winter culture is exciting so much interest in Nebraska, this is of peculiar interest. The soy bean, the Japanese plant which has received so much comment in agricultural circles of late, is represented by a number of varieties which have been grown at the experiment station. Turkestan alfalfa, which has been grown at the same place and which is a hardler variety of alfalfa than that commonly caised in this country, may also be seen. A collection of the products of corn comorises an astonishingly large number of useful substances made from that material. The glucose factory alone is represented by thirty-six products which it put upon the

In this region, where pasture is of such great importance, this collection is particularly valuable, as it comprises the grasses that may be looked to as of value for pasture purposes. Among these, the grass of greatest promise is the Hungarian brome-grass (Bromus inermis), a grass whose home is in eastern Europe and western Asia and which has shown itself so well adapted to

"Bryan," the famous 168-pound catfieb, which attracted so much attention in the Fisheries' building on the opening date of the fair, passed into another world last night. Unlike the man after whom it was named the fish was unable to withstand the hardships of traveling and the severe knocks received while enroute from the hatcheries at South Bend, coupled with constant confinement in a small tank, soon changed him from the wildest to the weakest fish in the building. "Bryan's" last hours were spent in the improvised hospital in the rear of the Fisheries' building, where he received the onstant attention of Robert Oberfelder. president of the State Fish commission, and dam Shoup, superintendent of the state hatcheries. Today the remains lay in state in the fish morgue and were viewed by over 10,000 people. Members of the fish commission, as well as all persons connected with the fair, mourn deeply the loss of this immense fish.
