AGAINST COURT HOUSE BONDS
 Central Labor Union Will Have Committee There to Protest.
FEDERAL UNION GETS ITS CHARTER BACK
 Row of Long Standing Comes Up and is Settled After a Great Deal of Debate Between the Delegates.
 Central Labor union will have a committee at the meeting of the county commissioners this morning to protest against the proposed issue of bonds for a new court house. George Kleffner of South Omaha brought the subject up at the meeting of the Central union Friday evening, declaring his conviction that it would be an unwise move for many reasons he enumerated, chief among which was a probability that Omaha and South Omaha will soon consolidate and constitute a county by themselves and this issue of bonds might interfere with the issue of bonds for the acquisition of the water works. After discussion by several votes the union expressed its disapproval of the proposition by a unanimous vote and a committee was appointed comprising A. Taylor, George Kleffner and Fred M. Youngs to present the protest to the commissioners.
 The controversy over the charter of federal union last came up on the application of Otto Schwerin for recognition as a delegate from that union, which is an organization of unskilled labor. It appeared from the discussion that ensued that there is dissension in that union, arising from the mysterious disappearance of about $100 in funds realized from a picnic during the summer. Some eight or ten members, who are accused of having been privy to the loss of the treasure, have withdrawn from the union. Schwerin appeared as a representative of the remaining faction in place of one of those who have retired. The claims of the Schwerin faction were presented by George Mitchell, who declared that some of the retiring members had stolen the charter and papers from the union's desk in Washington hall, and had turned it over to C. E. Sparks, secretary of the Central Labor union, who is also organizer for the American Federation of Labor, from which the federation derived its charter. After a heated controversy Schwerin was admitted and obligated as a delegate from the union and Secretary Sparks was directed to return the charter to the remaining faction.
 J. Pellean and J. White were admitted as delegates from the Bootmakers' union. Ed F. Kennedy from the Bootmakers' union, Ed F. Hope of the Bookbinders to succeed George W. Ed H. Stephan of the Cigar-makers to succeed H. A. Neilson and B. C. Dodd of the Waiters' to succeed Howard Harvey. The above delegates were obligated.
 The names of W. J. Wales and George E. Russell were submitted as selections of representatives of the Electrical Workers' union. Action went over until the next meeting.
 A letter was read from Charles R. Jones, who wrote from Billings, Mont., asking the Central Labor union to warn all men against listening to the importunities of western railroad labor agents, who are hiring men indiscriminately and shipping them to that country on the pretense that they can secure work on a railroad they represent as being but a short distance out of that place. He writes that the agents charge these men from $1 to $5, furnish them transportation and keep their baggage checks until they have paid their fare. There was no work there at any price, he writes, and not enough room in the town to house the people now there. This communication was referred to the press committee.
 Boycotts by the Meat Cutters' union against five meat markets for differences with the union were endorsed and it appeared from the discussion that one of those whose names of business is affected objected to the wording of the union card which has been suspended in his shop. It is headed "International Union Market," and the proprietor complained that many customers who did not read all of the card took it as this meant that the shop belonged to some combination for advancing prices of meat.
 The chair appointed Hollis Tyler of the Waiters' union a member of the organization committee, and William Schneider and F. H. Mann as members of the home industry and union labor committee, while A. H. Schneider of the Musicians' was named as fraternal delegate from South Omaha.

Consumption Cured.
 An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple, vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections; also a positive cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 331 Powers' block, Rochester, N. Y.

Park Board Work Progressing.
 Much of the work outlined by the Board of Park Commissioners in recent meetings has been completed. A new way has been graded through Kountze park, east of the twentieth street bridge across the lagoons. The approaches to the bridge have been dangerous for some time and were not used. The driveway was built to open travel on the street prior to the time when the lagoon will be filled and the park restored. Grading will begin work on Curtis Turner park next week. The ground will be leveled and put in such condition that the horse and motor cars may be placed there. In Hemp park a drive is completed which connects the boulevard with Thirty-seventh street.

NEIGHBORS EXCHANGE SHOTS
 Each Mistook the Other for a Chicken Thief and Both Got Hurt.
 C. S. Gage, who lives in a sparsely settled section a quarter of a mile east of the Country Club house, heard a noise in his chicken coop the other night, so taking his trusty shotgun he went to the place, and he saluted forth to inquire the cause. Joel Hawkins, whose home adjoins that of Gage, also heard the noise. Dressing hurriedly he took his shotgun from behind the hall door and sauntered out.
 Now it happens that both Hawkins and Gage are chicken fanciers. Behind the dwelling of each is a large yard enclosed with a picket fence, topped with wire screen, and the yards are separated by a chicken-proof stockade. At the rear of each back yard is a house for the fowls and still farther to the rear, without the enclosures, is a clump of scrub timber and underbrush.
 Gage approached from the north and Hawkins from the south. The dry twigs crackling under their feet. Through the scant foliage the moon cast a wan light and on either hand were eerie shadows.
 It was just such a scene as the stage electrician would delight to create and had he been there he would have bathed these two crouching figures in a flood of green calcium.
 As it was each took the other for the chicken thief. For two hours, until the break of the chill, gray dawn, they watched each other, each taking care to keep under cover. Then Gage summoned courage and made a charge. There were two dashes of light; two explosions, two charges of the bird shot found lodgment in human flesh, two yells. Then, recognizing each other's voices, they compared notes and found that neither was badly hurt.
 Hawkins told the story of a hatching of light; two explosions, two charges of the bird shot found lodgment in human flesh, two yells. Then, recognizing each other's voices, they compared notes and found that neither was badly hurt.
