HAYDEN BROS.

NEW USE FOR DERMATOLOGY

Husband Changes His Facial Contour and Escapes Wife's Recognition.

BOARDED AT HER HOUSE FOR OVER A WEEK
Forgot to Pay His Bill When He Left and Took His Little Daughter Awny with Him.

If the theory of Mrs. Harriet Vandagriff is correct, a new use has been discovered for dermatology, or facial surgery, which had recently sprung into prominence in several of the larger cities. Her husband, she says, has had his countenance altered according to this method, and it so changed his appearance that she didn't know him. His disguise was complete. The surgeon had changed the contour of his face as effectually as a landscape gardener modifies the topography of a terrace, and she is inclined to believe that his mission is improved.

Thus "masked" H. J. Vandagriff entered the boarding house conducted by his deserted spouse, whom he hadn't seen for two years, shared her hospitality for a week and departed, taking with him their little daughter, Cora, 8 years old.
He went away without paying his board bill, but Mrs. Vandagriff has his trunk, and it was while rummaging through the old clothes and trash in the saratoga that she discovered the identity of her late guest.
Monday a note appeared in The Bee to the effect that the child had disappeared. Mrs. Harriet Vandagriff, who runs a boarding house at 2420 Blaine street, did not at that time connect the disappearance of "Fred Miller," the stranger, with that of little Cora, but supposed the child had run away unattended. It was not until she began to search through the trunk he had left, hoping to find something of value to offset his debt, that she chanced upon several letters addressed to H. J. Vandagriff. The contents of these letters cleared away the mystery. The man who had introduced himself to her as Fred Miller was her husband who had deserted her in Chicago two years before. A surgical operation and a heavy growth of beard sufficed to make his disguise effective.

Just why Vandagriff saw fit to have his physiognomy altered is not apparent, though his wife inclines to the belief that it was to aid him in escaping the responsibility for some crime. Several years ago, she says, he was arrested in Chicago on a charge of forgery and was photographed according to the rules of the Bertillon system. His case never came to trial, however. It is her opinion that he has "been in some more mischief" and that his visage was modified to elude the detectives.

Not Completely Made Over.
Vandagriff's nose was retouched, it is now aquiline. That, so far as his wife is able to say, is the extent of the metamorphosis wrought by the surgeon. The rest is nature's own work and consists in a heavy, full black beard. From hints dropped in one of the letters found in his trunk it appears that he has visited one of the facial surgeons in New York who advertises to correct inartistic outlines of feature, make big mouths small, straighten crooked noses, pin back protruding ears, remove smallpox marks and generally improve upon nature's handiwork in the matter of the human face divine. He has elaborated upon the idea of the dual identity. From the H. J. Vandagriff with a turn-up nose he has become Fred Miller, with a Roman nose. He is a sort of a Jekyll and Hyde monstrosity, but in lieu of the mysterious salt used by Stevenson's character the transformation is wrought by the surgeon's scalpel.
Mrs. Vandagriff called at the police station yesterday for the third time this week, the purpose of her last visit being to report that her child had been located in Coffeyville, Kan., with her husband's parents, and that she had ceased to worry concerning its safety.

"Cora is a smart girl," said she, "and I knew she'd be pretty near able to take care of herself. But as to him (her husband) he was a puzzle to me. Of course he reminded me of my husband. A hundred times while he was in the house I caught myself staring at him and trying to reconcile him with the father of my child, but a glance at that profile invariably convinced me that I was mistaken. He seldom spoke, and never once did he look me square in the eyes. If he had I believe I should have known him in spite of all."
The police have been advised of Vandagriff's curious exploit since Tuesday of this week, and have been working quietly on the case upon the theory that he was still in the city with the child. So far as they have been able to learn he is not "wanted" for any crime.

MEAT CUTTERS END BOYCOTT

Embargo Laid Upon Products of Swift's Packing House Removed by Union's Order.

Word has been received in Omaha that the boycott declared on the products of the Swift Packing company has been raised by the Meat Cutters' union and that the formal action will be announced at the meeting of the Central Labor union tonight. This action ends one of the most prolonged labor contests of the country. Over two years ago the trouble between Swift and the cutters' union started in Chicago and Kansas City. So far as known the conditions causing the strike in those cities did not exist in South Omaha and as a matter of fact members of the union have worked in the South Omaha house during the time the boycott was declared effective.
The matter was taken up by the American Federation of Labor and all affiliated societies endorsed the action of the meat cutters, placing fines upon all members purchasing the product of the Swift houses. The fight waxed warm for a time, but changing conditions in the cities where the packing houses were located brought about changes in the houses so that today some of the causes of complaint have been removed and others have been lost sight of. The ending of the strike cannot be considered a victory for either side.

Came Near Dying.
"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Louther, clerk of the district court at Centerville, Ia. "I thought I should surely die and tried a dozen different medicines, but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely. I went to sleep and did not awake for eight hours on awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on getting to the office is to write to the manufacturers of this remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say: 'God bless you and the splendid medicine you make!'"

Yellow Fever on Shipboard.
NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Joseph Mendelsohn of Chicago, a first-class cabin passenger on the Ward line steamer Mexico, which arrived on Wednesday, October 16, from Havana, was among those removed to Hoffman island for observation. He complained of feeling ill and was removed to Barbours island hospital for treatment. Last evening he developed unmistakable symptoms of yellow fever. Dr. Eddy says the case is mild and the patient is doing fairly today.
