

After Election, Because the Nerve Tension of a Prolonged Campaign Will Be Ended.

BUT WHO WILL BE ELECTED?

No Matter—Tuesday Will Tell—Means while the Bankers Reserve Will Go On Writing Business.

Life in these strenuous campaign periods is more or less burdensome. Campaign funds are collected and expended. Campaign lies are concocted and exploded. Campaign speeches are made and delivered. Everything has a campaign flavor, from the soda pop to the Manhattan cocktail.

It Makes One Weary. of course. Elections come too often, but we may as well be good-natured over it. We bemoan the degeneracy of the times because an election costs as much as $10,000,000 to each of the great contracting parties. Yet we go on year after year contributing from our Nebraska resources.

$1,500,000.00 in Cold Cash to the eastern life insurance magnates. We leave with them permanently $1,000,000 every year. We kiss it good-bye with nonchalance that is surprising, though a little forethought and a little attention to business principles will show

How Easily We Could Fix It so that this tremendous outgo of much-needed cash can be arrested. Build up home life insurance companies by giving to these institutions the premiums we now send out of the state. Nothing is simpler, nothing more certain. If we import more than we export the balance of trade is against us. The Balance of Trade in Nebraska is against us on this life insurance proposition in a sum exceeding $1,000,000 annually. How long will it take our population, slightly exceeding 1,000,000, to expend in cash as much money as

J. K. Jones or Mark Hanna? The Bankers Reserve presents a policy just as good, just as liberal, just as reliable as that of any eastern life insurance company and in some respects it is superior; the company believes it has the best policies in the world and

B. H. Robison, President of the Bankers Reserve, is firmly of the opinion that Nebraskans are waking up to the importance of maintaining at home these great financial institutions. Until this young, vigorous and successful company, christened

The Bankers Reserve Life, began to write more business in Nebraska than any single competitor in the state it was difficult to make Nebraskans understand that it would be possible to put an end to the bad financing which constantly keeps a balance of trade against us. Write to B. H. Robison, McCague building, Omaha, for terms and particulars.

The Difference . . . Some beers are brewed with the very best materials, but the water used is not what it should be, hence the beer cannot be called perfect.

It is different with our popular BLUE RIBBON bottled beer. The materials we use in the production of this famous brand are the very best in quality and the water used is direct from our own artesian well-insuring a pure, perfect and wholesome beer. PHONE 1289. OMAHA BREWING ASSOCIATION.

New Departure In German Schools

Many German school boys and girls, besides learning reading, writing and arithmetic, have regular classes in cabbages and potatoes. Sometimes on Wednesday afternoon and sometimes on Friday whole classes of neatly dressed, yellow-haired children may be seen marching through the streets with their teacher at the head of the procession, on their way to the school garden. Many German cities, but especially Leipzig and Plauen, in Saxony, have set aside a plot of land not far from the schools where all sorts of vegetables and plants are grown. These afternoons spent in gardening are really the best kinds of vacations and the boys and girls enjoy them hugely. Here they learn how to transplant trees, how to sow all kinds of different seeds, why the cabbage is first cousin to the cauliflower—for with the gardening they are taught botany—when turnips should be pulled and how to tell when a melon is ripe. Not only do they have useful vegetables in these gardens, but weeds are also planted, each variety being properly labeled, so that every boy will know its name. Then there are poison ivy and other poisonous plants in a plot by themselves, and each pupil learns to recognize them so that he may avoid them in the woods.

At the school garden in Leipzig there is also a beautiful little pond full of water plants of many varieties, with a pavilion near at hand, where the boys and girls may find shelter if a shower blows up. It is a wonderfully interesting sight on a bright afternoon to see this Leipzig garden swarming with children, some picking strawberries, with the teacher explaining what strawberries really are botanically, how they put out runners and how they should be transplanted, cultivated and protected in winter. And sometimes, though these German boys are wonderfully well-behaved, a strawberry slips into a small mouth. Others may be seen catching cabbage caterpillars, others hoeing and raking.

All this not only brings vigor and interest to the pupils, but it inspires them to start little gardens at home where they take the greatest interest in putting their learning into practice. German children go to school longer during the year than Americans, having only four weeks of vacation in summer, although they have two weeks at Christmas, two at Easter and a fall vacation of two weeks in October, so that these school gardens help to give them more outdoor life. Every two weeks the gardener has a circular printed and distributed telling what plants are in bloom, what fruits are ripe and so on, so that every child may see them, in this way learning botany by actual observation on the ground. This is the more necessary because German city children have very little opportunity of seeing how the wild plants grow, because most of the forests and fields which are uninhabited are
