Senator Tillman Tilts Into Grover Cleveland with Sharpest Lance.

AYS BRYAN HAS NO CLAIM TO PRESIDENCY

Explains That No Man Has a Mortgage on 1904, at This Stage—William J. Auld, Making Prophecy of Democracy's Policy.

The tenth annual banquet of the Jacksonian club of Nebraska, at the Millard hotel last night, was the most ambitious effort of the society, and only untoward circumstances caused it to fall in any particular.

The plans of the club contemplated addresses by four or more prominent Democrats of the United States. Governor Beckham of Kentucky and J. Hamilton Lewis of Washington failed to keep their appointments, leaving William J. Bryan and Senator Tillman of South Carolina as the only speakers of national prominence on the program.

It was after 9 o'clock when the doors of the Millard dining room were thrown open and the select guests of the Jacksonians with about 300 members of the club filled the four tables which ran across the dining room. There was a total absence of decorations. The pictures of democratic heroes of times past, which erstwhile looked upon democrats united in their annual feasts, were not upon the walls. Flags and bunting were conspicuous by their absence.

W. O. Gilbert, the president-elect of the association, presided at the head of the tables. Seated on his right was W. J. Bryan and on his left Senator Tillman. The other guests of honor who occupied seats at the table with the toastmaster were ex-Governor James E. Boyd, Harry O'Neill, Edgar Howard of Columbus, W. M. Maupin, E. V. Raley of Crete, A. C. Shallenberger, congressman-elect from the Fifth district, G. M. Hitchcock, C. J. Smyth, Judge Hollenbeck of Fremont and Dr. Reilly.

Among the prominent Nebraska democrats present were M. W. Murray of Pender, representative from that district; Senator T. F. Zoiegler, Dr. T. L. Hall of Lincoln, Patrick Gleason, August Litz, Ar. Newman and E. A. Baugh of Oakland, Frank Morgan of Auburn, Senator Plattsmouth, T. H. Mahoney of Greeley Center, Nicholas Fortz of Pender, E. V. Raley of Crete, the only man in the democratic party in the state of Nebraska who voted for Andrew Jackson; J. P. Latta of Tekamah, J. B. Kelleher of Auburn, Senator Meredith of Ashland, T. B. Fenner of Kearney, Phil Kohl of Wayne, George Corcoran of York, O. N. Humphrey and Ralph Whited of Lincoln, Matt Miller of David City, V. A. Helmbarger of Grand Island, M. W. Wilson of Plattsmouth, Phelps of Schuyler, William Carr of Lincoln and John A. Johnson of Stratford, Ia.

The menu of the banquet was as follows: Blue Points. Consomme Victoria. Salted Almonds. Olives. Fresh Shrimps. Newburg. Fillet of Beef, Marchale. Roast Turkey. Oyster Dressing. Canned Sweet Potatoes. Creamed Corn. Jackonian Pudding. Neapolitan Ice Cream. Assorted Cakes. Raspberry Cheesecake. Toasted Crackers. Sauterise. Claret. Champagne. Cigars. Club Looks Well After Election.

It was 11 o'clock when Toastmaster Gilbert arose to call time for speeches. He congratulated the club on its fine appearance after what was considered by its enemies as a solar plexus blow. The opposition would not have been so bitter if never keeping down Banquo's ghost would not be in it with the Jacksonian club. "In an uphill fight our patron saint was at his best, and the club will be found following in his wake. The boat in the club is shown by its increase in membership since its retirement to winter quarters in November." His reference to the favorite son of Nebraska and South Carolina was received with demonstrative applause. He closed by introducing Harry E. O'Neil, who responded to the toast, "The Jacksonians."

Applause long and continued greeted the speaker, who immediately entered upon his subject, paraphrasing Webster: "Requiescat, Jacksonian club needs none. There it stands, possessing one of Andrew Jackson's attributes, for it was said that he was most dangerous after defeat. It has spread its influence all over the land. The spirit of the club is manifest in a toast proposed by William J. Bryan, a member of congress: 'Andrew Jackson—May Every Democrat in Nebraska Be as Courageous as He in Advocating the Rights of the People.' In the last battle we captured several big gains from the enemy. If we had won by the assistance of the traits we would have lost. Tonight the club dedicates itself anew to the principles of Jefferson and Jackson."

The toastmaster introduced Senator Tillman of South Carolina, who responded to the toast, "The Democratic Party: Its Duty and Destiny."

Three Species of Democrats. The senator from South Carolina was received by the club on its feet, with handkerchiefs waving. He said that his cordial reception had made him feel like Wellington at Waterloo, when, in a critical time in the battle, he cried, "Up, guards, and at them!" "I felt that it would hardly be worth my time to come to Nebraska to speak to a lot of democrats whom I believed to be disgraced and running with their tails tucked between their legs, consulted with some of my colleagues and now I am glad I am here.

"Call things by their names. There are three kinds of men who call themselves democrats. We must consider the genuine article, the next class, who in genuine form has an office, and the third class, who think that they are the depositories of democratic doctrine and that wisdom will die with them. If South Carolina no longer leads the south she is not at the tail. The note I sound tonight will be the tune the south will sing when the time comes to vote. First, we have a large number of men who have inherited their democracy and, like good sons of noble sires, are standing by the principles of liberty. This is the great rank and file—the 95 per cent of the 6,500,000 who in the face of treachery reorganized the party in 1854 and took its party from the dust, the voice of the people for the first time being heard and placed in the hands of this man (indicating Bryan).

"The next class of democrats are the men who want to run, who will sacrifice principles to get possession of the government. They are the time servers—bright men who often hamper the rank and file. They are now ready to throw up the sponge. They are the men who will give heed to the overtures for reorganization. These are the men who have to be watched.

"Next we have a small contingent who were once the trusted leaders of the party—men who furnished the sinews of war, who directed the policy of the party. These are represented at this time by that chorus which has broken from so many sources that it is hard to locate it—what came the day after the election, when they returned from the polls with their daggers dripping with democratic blood, crying for a reorganization of the party. In 1852, when the president called for all loyal democrats to support the ticket, we did it. What did they do in '94? They deserted. I swear, if Grover Cleveland and his crowd are democrats, I have never been one! (Loud cheers and cries of "Hit him again!") The day after election the papers are filled with the optimism of the man and his satellites, calling for a reorganization of the party. They are now attempting to seduce the second class and lead them into the republican party as an ally.

"Is there room for two republican parties? Yes, there is the difference between the policy of Harrison and Cleveland, as shown by their administrations? In two years after the inauguration of Cleveland a democratic majority in congress was changed to a larger republican majority. As political insolence, has the claim of Cleveland today ever had an equal? I would rather fight in defeat and go down year after year than surrender to any such treachery and villainy.

Stand by Jackson and Lincoln.

"My people would retire me were I to attempt to follow this man. Perhaps an adoring him, but I would rather stand by the man of all men acknowledged to propose that we shall acknowledge we have been a lot of fools, and give us the alternative of choosing a living one out of office or a renunciation of our principles. I would rather stand by the man who is a charlatan. Democratic duty? It is to stand by the principles of Jefferson and Jackson and the cause for which Abraham Lincoln died. I have said on the hustings that, measured by the standards of Jefferson and Jackson, Abraham Lincoln was a better democrat than Jefferson Davis, and measured by the standard of Abraham Lincoln, Bryan is a better republican than McKinley.

"We cannot say what will be the issue in 1904. We cannot discuss the matter in the interest of any one man. Here before Mr. Bryan I say that he cannot claim any right to the office. No man can—four years before the time of the nomination.

"Our destiny, if we are true to our traditions, is to go down the middle of the road looking neither to the right nor to the left. We want no time-servers in the ranks. Our destiny is to get possession of the government and bring it back to the principles upon which it was founded. If we are false to the traditions of Jefferson and Jackson and Bryan we deserve defeat and will receive it. Some of the young men here will go to Washington to see an imperial Caesar receive his crown upon the steps of the capitol.

"At the close of Tillman's speech the crowd standing sang "America." A letter of regret was read from Governor Beckham of Kentucky, who sent the greetings of his state to Bryan and the club.

W. M. Maupin then responded to the toast, "The Press."

Following Mr. Maupin E. V. Raley of Crete, who had met Andrew Jackson, made a short talk, congratulating the club upon its growth and prosperity and its deeds of valor. The venerable democrat from Crete has been a feature of the club for several years. He met Jackson at Belleville, Penn., while the general was on his way from the "Shrimp to Baltimore" and was at the meeting. He threw into the meeting the only spirit of commemoration of the anniversary of the battle of New Orleans. He

Senator Tillman True to Bryan.

Has No Sympathy with Reorganizers of Democratic Party.

Yesterday afternoon Senator Tillman of South Carolina, who spoke at the Jacksonian banquet last night, talked interestingly on national affairs from a democratic standpoint. Speaking of the proposed change in policy, he said: "There is no one asking for a change in the policy of the party except those who have tried to get the party since they were deposed from its management. You find no man who voted for Bryan talking favorably of any change.

"What is the policy of the democratic minority in the senate?" he was asked. "Our policy so far as outlined is not one of delay. We will discuss all measures, offer such amendments as seem to us wise and then let the republican majority bear the responsibility for the result of the enactment of laws. I feel a fool for leaving Washington at the present time. The debate on the military bill is now at its height and I feel like I should be present. Had I known that the bill would have been up for consideration at this time I never would have hesitated to come to Omaha, but at that time I knew nothing of what the bill would be discussed, and I came to fulfill my promise. That bill will be passed practically as it is at present. I believe some amendments may be made, but it is the policy of the majority to give the majority all the rope it wants, then if it hangs itself it is no fault of ours."

Senator Tillman is the father of the South Carolina dispensary law for the control of liquor traffic and he has fought its battles in every state campaign since it was passed. In every campaign it is made an issue, the war upon the measure being exceedingly fierce last fall. Speaking of this matter, he said: "The friends of the dispensary law have been successful in the last campaign by big majorities, and if there are any amendments made it will be by the friends of the law. That the state controls the liquor traffic better under the dispensary system than it possibly can through private sale is proven by a comparison of the states of South Carolina and Kansas. In the former state 370 retail liquor licenses were issued by the United States, while the number in Kansas was approximately 2,000.

"These men will congregate in Omaha during the annual meeting and give much of their time to the discussion of 'shop,' but committees are arranging so that there shall be some social indulgence in order to make the meeting a memorable one. The editing editor will be extending the glad hand of Omaha. They will be taken to the theater and before they get out of town will be dined and wined and made to feel the warmth of Omaha's hospitality.

The business sessions of the association will be held on the morning of January 22 and 23, and will be held on subjects of interest to the craft by prominent newspaper men and publishers of the state, and a number of interesting technical and practical questions will be considered. S. H. Huse, ex-president of the association, who edits the Daily News at Norfolk, will be the editor of a daily paper, to be issued during the time that the association is in convention. This feature of the meeting will be an innovation and promises to be a most successful one.

RECEPTION PROVES A FROST.

Jackonian People Find Dilemma Propositon.

The day preceding the tenth annual banquet of the Jacksonian club was not filled with promise for the success of that event. The weather, which was scheduled to arrive in the morning, failed to put in an appearance. W. J. Bryan arrived at the Burlington depot at 3 o'clock. The committee was not expecting him at that hour, so he came unattended to the Paxton hotel, where he was met by a reception. At about 4 o'clock Senator Tillman arrived in the city and was driven to the Millard, where he retired until the hour of the banquet. A committee from the club called and requested him to visit the headquarters, but he refused, pleading weakness. When that committee returned to the club room they found that Mr. Bryan had dropped in informally and shaken hands with the people in the room and then left. He returned immediately and the reception was at an end.

Buttons Don't Justify His Faith.

"The republican party said in the campaign of 1900 that they were not in favor of imperialism—they now openly favor it. Many people had the idea that the charge was overdrawn. They said that when the campaign was over and the medals had been awarded, they would be over. We claimed otherwise, and time will justify our belief. When the American people understand that we are the conservative party and the republican party is the radical—yes, the revolutionary party—they will come to us.

Divorce as a Parable.

"I am going to say little on the subject of party reorganization and that little is this: When a woman gets a divorce from her husband on the ground of lack of support, that husband should not express solicitude for the wife's fate until they are married again. The day will come when Hanna's power and Hanna's self shall fall and one

Judge Edgar Howard of Columbus, who says that he finds the running of a newspaper more profitable than running for congress, is the city visitor for a few days with friends. He came down to attend the Jacksonian banquet.

The largest attendance of the year was present at yesterday's meeting of the Women's club. An exceptional musical program had been arranged, which had to be abandoned owing to the inability of a majority of the musicians to be present. This occasioned much disappointment, which was almost entirely dispelled, however, by an impromptu program, which proved most entertaining. The program was as follows:

First—A resume of the closing events of the year, by Mrs. O'Reilgh.

Second—A review of the rescue work supported by the club, by Mrs. Eggleston.

Third—Woman's property rights of Nebraska and an explanation of the proposed bill, Mrs. M. G. Andrews.

Fourth—A review of the work of the committee on state traveling libraries, Mrs. Harriet Towne.

Fifth—Opportunities and possibilities of club women, Mrs. Boff.

Sixth—Short talk by Mrs. Eggleston of St. Louis.

The club gave a vote of thanks to the lawyers who are so materially assisting the work of the committee on woman's property rights. A manifestation of sympathy was offered on account of Mrs. J. H. Millard's death.

The Women's Singing society is seriously considering a repetition of its concert of December 13 at Hanscom Park Methodist Episcopal church. The program on that occasion was unusually good and the numerous requests for a repetition were considered and decided upon at Friday's meeting.

Woman's Work in Club and Charity.

The annual business meeting and election of the Omaha chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, was held at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the audience room of the public library, about thirty-five members being present.

Before the meeting was called to order the members inspected the collection of relics of the revolutionary period on exhibition in the museum of the library. A number of relics of Fort Atkinson, among which were pieces of a sword and of a pistol, a buckle, a well preserved door lock, bullet, and a pocket watch, were on display. The Omaha chapter, were also examined with much interest, having been secured by the committee that visited Calhoun on December 18 in arrangement for the site of the proposed monument.

The meeting opened with the reading of preliminary reports, after which the officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Regent, Mrs. A. Allee; vice regent, Mrs. S. D. Barkalou; secretary, Miss Nancy Baxton; corresponding secretary, Miss Ida Johnston; treasurer, Mrs. John R. Webster; registrar, Miss Louise Harris; historian, Mrs. W. B. Williams; member of board of managers, Mrs. M. D. Lowrey; regent's alternate, Mrs. J. H. Webster; delegate to continental congress, Miss Ellenore Dutcher.

With the report from the board of managers was submitted a recommendation that the delegates to the continental congress be picked up on the site to be marked by the Omaha chapter, were also examined with much interest, having been secured by the committee that visited Calhoun on December 18 in arrangement for the site of the proposed monument.

in the original buildings of old Fort Atkinson, 1875, obtained to construct a foundation for the monument, and that several proposed monuments were exhibited and plans for raising funds for carrying out the undertaking were discussed, but nothing was decided upon.

A committee of five, consisting of a national board regarding the proposition to tender to Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt or Mrs. W. J. Bryan the nomination for president general. Resolutions adopted by the general and Tennessee Daughters of American Revolution, endorsing Mrs. B. M. McLean of New York for the office of president general and asking the Omaha chapter to exert its influence with the other chapters of Nebraska in behalf of her candidacy, were read.

A general discussion followed, in which the regent favored Mrs. McLean as friend to the Nebraska societies, whose influence had secured for this state a vice president general at the last continental congress. Miss Ellenore Dutcher spoke warmly in favor of Mrs. McLean, expressing it as her opinion that she was one of the most powerful friends of the western chapters. The resolution endorsing Mrs. McLean then carried, with little opposition.

An interesting article was read on the work of the Buffalo (N. Y.) chapter of that city, which is being carried on by means of patriotic lectures with stereopticon illustrations, held in Washington beginning the first Monday after February 22, be instructed to send to the public press on Wednesday and Friday a complete account of the proceedings of the meeting.

In her report the historian acknowledged the gift of relics from Mr. W. H. Woods of Calhoun and spoke of the work of marking the historic spots of the state as the most important work of the year. The membership committee's report showed an increase of twenty members in the past year, the chapter now numbering seventy-three.

An account was given of the medal awarded Miss Vera Fink of Lathrop school for the best essay on "Religion in the Colonies." It was decided that a regular sum be set aside for such a medal each year, the regent expressing it as her opinion that the results of the custom fully justified the expenditure.

The chairman of the committee to investigate the site of the proposed monument at Calhoun reported a sufficient amount of brick and other material used

ANNUAL MEET OF EDITORS

Arrangements Are Perfect for Mixing Pleasure with Business.

Arrangements already perfected and others still under way insure that the annual meeting of the Nebraska Press Association, which will be held in this city January 22 and 23, will be a most successful and enjoyable event.

The association has grown in membership during the last few years until it now includes almost all of the editors of the state and a number of men connected with Nebraska's metropolitan newspapers.

These men will congregate in Omaha during the annual meeting and give much of their time to the discussion of 'shop,' but committees are arranging so that there shall be some social indulgence in order to make the meeting a memorable one.

The editing editor will be extending the glad hand of Omaha. They will be taken to the theater and before they get out of town will be dined and wined and made to feel the warmth of Omaha's hospitality.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The annual meeting of the Board of Governors of Ak-Sar-Tien will be held at the Omaha club on Monday night. A regular meeting of the board is scheduled for tomorrow.

The Builders' and Traders' exchange yesterday elected the following officers for the ensuing year: J. J. Watt, treasurer; E. G. Hampton, directors; W. C. Billard, J. M. Board, H. Harris and R. L. Carter. The board of directors will elect a secretary later on.

John Joy was arrested late Monday afternoon by Sergeant Whelan and Detective Johnson while trying to dispose of a set of tools. He is charged with having stolen the tools from the harness and had brought it all back to his home at 1215 North 16th street. Police believe he stole the set in this city and are trying to find the owner.

Frank Flint, a one-eyed peddler residing at 146 South 26th street, became angry at his wife Monday night and it is reported that he tried to strangle her a few times, drove her and their two children out of the house and locked the door. He had barely settled down to a quiet night when Emergency Officer Baldwin and Patrolman Schubert broke in the door and sent him to jail. He was booked for wife-beating and being drunk and disorderly.

John Dugberry, arrested Sunday night by Detective Johnson and Officer Bloom, is not wanted in Buffalo as at first thought by Dugberry. His telegram received Monday night from the Buffalo chief said that the case against him would not be pressed.

Miss Ethel Richardson, who has a short time ago out of money and out of friends, has been rescued by her husband, who has returned home and fed and clothed him. When he left, she says, he took $10 worth of her husband's clothing, but she is not wanted here and was released upon the receipt of the telegram.
