everywhere, while several pictures, her private secretary, her bedroom table and wheel chair also travel with her, and as all of her bedrooms are paneled in pale green brocade they all closely resemble one another. The pictures she never has parted with are water color and miniature portraits of the prince consort, Princess Alice, duke of Saxe-Coburg, Empress Eugenie, Headmaster and some family groups, including those of the duke of York's children. The furniture, appointments and decorations of her private rooms are of the finest Louis Seize, and until quite recently she always read by the light of Cozia lamps, which thirty years ago replaced the wax candles which are still exclusively used on the royal dinner table. Her bedroom is adjoined by two private little sitting rooms, with a spacious corridor between, in which she often took slight walking exercises, leaning on the arm of her Indian attendant when the weather was too unpropitious to venture out. No one, not even Princess Beatrice, ever entered the queen's rooms unannounced, until the last few days, when the hand of death has waivered etiquette aside. The queen always preserved her dignity, and really a royal creature in her children, though cordial and charming to all.

eye and seeming drop in the left cheek and corner of the mouth, to indicate that perhaps the prince's nervous system was overdone.
Comes of Long-Lived Race.
He comes of a long-lived race and appears to have escaped entirely the hereditary taint which, having skipped a generation, manifested itself in nearly all his brothers and sisters. As king he must be more than a creature of system and etiquette. He cannot visit the Marlborough club. He cannot walk the streets. He must give more time to statesmen and less to society people, and he is also greatly limited in his cigarette and cigar smoking. In the country when outdoors he always smokes a briar pipe. His activity continues perfectly marvelous. He is still prepared to sit up until 2 in the morning over bacchari or bridge, but he never remains in bed after 8 in the morning and his whole correspondence is gone through before 10. His engagements usually are made weeks or even months ahead and are kept with scrupulous care. All his business, both official and private, is attended to with the utmost regularity. His whole time is occupied from morning until night with work, exercise or pleasure. There is no public man in England who lives as hard as he, and there is more than one point of contact.
It is said that the princess when queen will officiate herself much as Victoria, being devoted now wholly to religious exercises. The gap between them is impassable, and the prince's relations with the duke of York, too, are said to be none too affectionate. The duke affects to despise Sassoon Rothschild and other friends of his father, who on their side detest him, declaring he has far more airs than the prince. The family is in fact divided within itself, but the prince is its undisputed ruler, for he holds the purse strings and has an energy the others entirely lack.

QUEEN'S ELDEST DAUGHTER

Condition of Dowager Empress Frederick is Said to Be Very Much Worse.
LONDON, Jan. 21.—The following statement was received from the Dowager Empress Frederick's private physician, Dr. Seitz, who is said to be in the city.
It is with sincere regret that we announce that the Dowager Empress's condition has become more serious. There has been a serious development of the disease from which she is suffering and which is in the highest degree improbable that she will ever leave her bed.
This is somewhat at variance with reports from Berlin, where it was stated that the dowager empress is a trifle more favorable, but as the Associated Press has already announced the news that Queen Victoria was dying had a very serious effect on her eldest daughter. The dowager empress was very anxious to go to Osborne and did not abandon the hope of going until it was represented to her that it would be utterly impossible for her to undertake the journey.

KAISER'S TRIP TO OSBORNE

Agrarian Organized Filled with Denunciatory Articles on That Account.
BERLIN, Jan. 21.—Most of the German newspapers express sincere concern as to Queen Victoria and praise Emperor William for going to Osborne. The agrarian and Pan-German journals, however, take a different view. The agricultural Tagblatt, an agrarian organ, concludes an abusive article in this style: "The rising of English power is now followed by a decline. That she has seen the beginning of such a decline has given Queen Victoria a death knell." The Tagblatt also predicts the decay of that whose splendid development she had witnessed during a long life. This is the tragic finale of her prolonged reign. The most important question for Great Britain is whether the new king will be able to lead his way out of South Africa again.
Some of the papers already address the prince of Wales as the coming sovereign, and the Berliner Tagblatt prints a dispatch asserting that he is Germanophile in his sympathies.

RUSSIANS SPEAK WELL OF HER

Queen's Illness Affects Can't Subjects and Effects Words of Kindness from Them.
ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 21.—The commercial circles were considerably affected by Queen Victoria's illness. The czar's subjects freely admit that her majesty has been one of the principal bulwarks of peace. The Russia and Novosti alone touch the political chord.
The Russia says: "England's prestige is largely due to the queen. To spare Queen Victoria much has been forgiven her ministers. With her will depart Britannia's good genius."
The Novosti says: "England is discontented with the situation and the dissatisfaction possibly be expressed more plainly if Queen Victoria dies. Her successor will probably entertain different views on the many questions. He is credited with strong, fresh sympathies. The power of an English sovereign is greater than commonly stated, therefore the change may produce a revolution in international politics."
It is said that the queen is suffering from a cold in the throat, and the Dominion of Canada among French Canada.

HE WILL CABLE TO THE KING

Official Etiquette Prescribes for the President Only Messages Expressing His Regret.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The greatest interest and sympathy is manifested in official circles here in the condition of the queen. Every bulletin coming by cable is awaited with anxiety. Moreover, the character of the inquiries indicates clearly that the interest is not confined to the official class, nor is it perfunctory. While the president and the members of his cabinet and other high officials are by their own request promptly notified of every change in the scene at Osborne, all of the employees in the executive departments, even the humblest messenger, are equally diligent in seeking for the latest information.
There is little to be done officially here when the end comes, and that little is perfectly well defined by precedent. The president will communicate directly from the White House an expression of his regret to the prince of Wales, or rather to King Edward VII, as he will be by the time the message is indited. Secretary Hay will communicate to the cabinet his own official expression of the sentiments of this government. These will be by cable also. Later on formal exchanges will take place by mail.
By this means the State department will be officially informed of the accession of the new monarch to the throne. It will return its official acknowledgments and that will be all that is prescribed by the rules of official etiquette.

BELGIUM THE ONE EXCEPTION

From All Other Places Only Words of Sympathy Have Been Received.
LONDON, Jan. 21.—The dispatches received here from nearly every capital in Europe, from India, Australia, Jamaica and all the British colonies, show the press and people to be sympathetic in their commiseration over the queen's illness. The only exception seems to be that received from Belgium. A majority of the Brussels newspapers in good taste, but one pro-Bauer paper there takes the occasion to make political attack on Great Britain's South African policy.
A dispatch from Pretoria says the queen's illness has caused a profound sensation there. Special prayers were offered in all the churches of the garrison towns yesterday evening. Many functions in Great Britain and on the continent have been abandoned. The emperor of Mexico, Emperor Francis Joseph has commended the court ball at Vienna, fixed for this evening.

Public Functions Cancelled.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The engagements of cabinet ministers and other notable persons to appear at public dinners, at charitable fairs or at the dedication of public buildings, etc. are being canceled and it seems likely that all functions of this sort will be postponed throughout the United Kingdom.
The duke and duchess of Devonshire have recalled their invitations to a public party, and their example is being followed by other distinguished persons. Many public dinners have been deferred.

Colonies Express Distress.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The colonial office has received dispatches from the governors of the Australian and the South African colonies expressing their anxiety and distress at the queen's illness.
Cabinet Prepares itself.
LONDON, Jan. 21.—The inner circle of the cabinet has been in session this afternoon in connection with official procedure in the event of her majesty's death.

Right to Tax the Indians.

South Dakota Opinion Bears on This Issue. SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Jan. 21.—(Special.)—In the suit recently instituted in the United States court here under the direction of the attorney general of the United States against James A. Rickert, county treasurer of Roberts county, to determine the right of county and state authorities to assess and tax the personal property and improvements of Indians who have taken allotments of land in severalty, Judge Carland has just rendered a decision of far-reaching importance, as it will have a bearing on the taxation of Indians in similar cases in other states of the union.
The decision of Judge Carland is in part as follows:
The status of South Dakota has the undoubted authority to classify property for the purposes of taxation. It has the right to say that property which might technically be called real property by virtue of the provisions of the common or statute law, is, for the purposes of taxation, to be called personal property. Improvements made upon these allotted lands, for the purposes of taxation, are to be deemed personal property and they were so assessed by the officers of the county of Roberts. There is no pretense in the hands of the county of Roberts that the property of the Indians has been attempted in any way to tax the allotted land itself and whether the land itself is taxable is not a question presented in this case.
The Indians, having severed their tribal relations and adopted the ways of civilized life and having become full citizens of the United States and owners of property in the state of South Dakota, in which different position are they in regard to the taxation of their property. The county of Roberts has attempted in any way to tax the allotted land itself and whether the land itself is taxable is not a question presented in this case.

He explained to the board that the health commissioner's communication to him was a peremptory order for vaccination, while the city and health authorities were sent letters which merely asked that vaccination be advised.
