Corset Giances

The P. D. Corset, the most popular corset imported—regular price $3.50, $2.75 and $2.50 each—reduced to $1.00. Think of a French corset for $1.00—just as good as they ever were, but sizes broken—worth as much to you, but with us it's different. So when we find these styles with sizes missing, instead of filling up stock we drop the price to send them out quickly. Also a few sizes of Royal Worcester and Thompson's Glove Fitting. Good fitting corsets. Their names will tell you that, and although we are selling thousands of other corsets there's not a better style than those you will find on sale Friday and Saturday.

THOMPSON, BELDEN & Co.

$15,000 in the proposed appropriation. Representative McGowan of Dixon wanted the bill indefinitely postponed, after a tremendous oratorical effort, succeeded in having it placed on the general file for consideration in the committee of the whole. In its regular order it will come before the committee of the whole in about two weeks. The following bills were placed on the general file at the recommendation of standing committees: House rolls 186, by Fowler, to provide for recovery of damages from county in cases of lynchings; 190, by Sears, to make good stealing a felony; 190, by Loomis, relating to the jurisdiction of county judges; 191, by Watson, to make senate and house journals legal evidence of the proceedings; 193, by Hunt, relating to the publication of liquor license notices; 254, by Fowler, relating to the discharge of mortgages.

These were indefinitely postponed: House rolls 71, by Crisney, to appropriate $25,000 for a brick twin factory at the state penitentiary; 132, by Bouillon, to designate a bird day as a holiday; 198, by Loomis, to require county judge to be practicing attorney. New Wing for Hospital. The house committee on public lands and buildings reported on the condition of the hospital for insane at Lincoln, recommending an appropriation of $4,000 to complete construction of new wing. It also recommended several repairs in the main building.

On motion of Jordan the action of yesterday in postponing senate file 25 was reconsidered and it was voted to place on the general file for consideration in committee of the whole. The measure changes the existing law relating to county affairs by giving the commissioners the right to refuse the usual appropriation under certain proportions of the money subscribed shall have been paid in cash.

House roll 177, by Lane, to create a state board of charities and corrections, was passed by a vote of 11 to 29. When this bill was ordered for third reading there was only a small majority of the members present and on the motion of Uhl, a call was ordered to enforce attendance. A motion to authorize the purchase of 5,000 copies of the Blue Book was introduced by Williams and after a short debate was referred to the committee on printing.

Bills on First Reading. The following bills were introduced in the house today: H. R. 331, by Corner—To amend sections 82 and 83 of an act providing for incorporating metropolitan cities and defining, prescribing and regulating their duties. H. R. 332, by Corner—To amend section 21 of subdivision 1, chapter 19 of the Compiled Statutes of Nebraska for 1891, entitled, "Schools," and to amend section 10 of the same.

H. R. 333, by Buresh—To amend section 14, chapter 20, Compiled Statutes of Nebraska for 1891, entitled, "Qualifications of a student at the Institute for the Blind," and to amend section 11 of the same, and to provide for compensation of an oculist and providing compensation therefore, and repealing section 14 as now existing.

H. R. 334, by McCoy—To authorize and direct the construction and furnishing of a brick and stone building to be used as a cooking school building and their equipment at the Institute for the Deaf and Dumb at Omaha, Neb., for the use of said institution, and appropriating the sum of $20,000 for the payment thereof.

H. R. 335, by Mead—Memorial and joint resolution concerning the public domain. H. R. 336, by Slocum—To amend sections 1 and 4 of subdivision 9, chapter 19, and to repeal sections 10, 7, 8 and 9 of subdivision 4, chapter 19, and section 10 of subdivision 10, chapter 19, Compiled Statutes of Nebraska.

H. R. 337, by Thompson—To govern supplies for the use of the state of Nebraska to pay best supplies at a reasonable price. H. R. 338, by Coppe—To appropriate $500,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the interest on the public debt.

H. R. 339, by Beebe—To establish a state board of examiners of engineers, to provide for the appointment of examiners of engineers, to regulate the occupation of engineering of railroad engineers and for the state of Nebraska and providing penalties for violations of the provisions of this act.

H. R. 340, by Hawxy—To provide for drainage of swamp lands and river bottoms crossed by railroad grades and for the construction of culverts and trestles.

SENATE AND THE KIDNAPERS Bill Carrying the Death Penalty Passes the Upper Branch of the Legislature.

LINCOLN, Feb. 14.—(Special.)—The senate this afternoon passed senate file 22, providing penalties for kidnaping. The bill provides that any person kidnaping or carrying off any person fraudulently shall be confined in the penitentiary not less than three nor more than seven years. Whoever shall unlawfully carry off, decoy, entice away or secrete any person for the purpose of extorting money, property or other valuable shall be imprisoned for the term of his natural life. Should the kidnaper injure or threaten to injure any person in their power shall, upon conviction, suffer death or be imprisoned for life. A penalty of not less than ten years is provided for any person convicted of threatening to kidnap any person. Other bills passed by the senate this afternoon were: Senate file 104, by McCargar, requiring a stamp on every bill of lading or invoice of the amount contained therein and the name of the manufacturer.

Senate file 171, by Miller, allowing the State Dairy association to fix the date of its annual meeting. Senate file 118, by Pitney, to prevent the spread of infectious and contagious diseases. Senate file 46, by Olson, requiring parties taking change of venue to take it to the nearest justice.

S. F. 70, by Martin, for the repeal of act creating board of transportation; to pass. S. F. 83, by Currie, relating to the employment of additional jurors for the supreme court; to be postponed.

EDWARD OPENS PARLIAMENT

Revival of Ancient Ceremonies Presents a Most Brilliant Spectacle. HOPES TO END THE BOER WAR SOON

Relations with All Foreign Powers Friendly—Expresses Intention to Follow in the Footsteps of His Royal Mother.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The opening of the first Parliament of the new reign witnessed the usual array of dignitaries. The members of the House of Commons to secure seats. Despite the Arctic weather, the members strolled up the steps of Parliament House shortly after midnight.

At daybreak a score of members had assembled, and after that the arrivals were in rapid succession. At 10:20 a detachment of Yeomen of the Guard, in their uniform of the day, arrived and conducted the customary search of the vaults for imaginary conspirators, with the usual result.

The first Parliament of the reign of King Edward VII was opened this afternoon by the king in person. His majesty was accompanied by Queen Alexandra, the duke of York and Cornwall, and the duke of Connaught and Cambridge stood near Lord Salisbury. With a motion of his hand the king signified that the distinguished gathering should sit, and the queen, whom his majesty favored with a glance over the shoulder by the hand, was the first to do so.

Then the gentleman usher of the black rod, after a deep obeisance, hurried to the House of Commons and in a few minutes the speaker, wearing state robes and attended by the sergeant-at-arms and chaplain, appeared at the bar. Behind them surged the members of the House of Commons. Scarcely had Great Britain's legislative chamber been opened than a turbulent spectacle was witnessed.

In solemn tones the lord chancellor administered the oath, with the king sitting. The king, in a kneeling attitude, handed the king a roll, which he signed after which all present stood up and the king put on his full marshal's plumed hat, rose and, in clear, ringing tones, read his speech; turned to the queen, helped her to rise, and led her out of the chamber into the gallery.

The king's speech was as follows: My Lords and Gentlemen: I address you for the first time at a moment of national glory. The whole country is mourning the death of a monarch who has left behind him a reputation which will live for ever, and a small escort of gentlemen-at-arms, in heraldic costumes, immediately surrounded the vehicle.

Five carriages of state, containing uniformed officials and ladies of the household, each drawn by a team of four horses, followed by Life Guards in full uniform, with silver breast plates and plumed helmets, and a small escort of gentlemen-at-arms, in heraldic costumes, immediately surrounded the vehicle.

The procession speedily traversed the short route of an accommodation road and, with shouts and the beating of drums, reached the palace of Westminster beneath the Victoria tower, at the appointed time. There the great officers of state and the others who were to take part in the ceremony had already taken their places.

Forms Brilliant Picture. The procession speedily traversed the short route of an accommodation road and, with shouts and the beating of drums, reached the palace of Westminster beneath the Victoria tower, at the appointed time.

The king and queen, in their robes of state, followed by the duke of Devonshire, the duke of Norfolk, the duke of Northumberland and other great nobles, entered the chamber. The king and queen, in their robes of state, followed by the duke of Devonshire, the duke of Norfolk, the duke of Northumberland and other great nobles, entered the chamber.

After some delay the robing room doors swung open and the procession, already formed, moved slowly ahead through the dingy gallery. No funeral could have been quieter. The aristocratic spectators were still.

Slowly the heralds marched toward the upper chamber. The sight of an usher, walking backward, heralded the approach of the king. The duke of Devonshire, president of the council, immediately preceded him, carrying in his arms the cushion on which rested the crown.

With equal dignity, clasped the sword of state, the king advanced toward the gallery before the altar remembered to courtesy and then black robes rustled ceaselessly and noble heads were bowed.

King and Queen Look Well. Smiling genially, the king bowed right and left. He never looked better. His huge, emerald cope gave an enormous breadth to his shoulders and set off his healthy color of his face. Queen Alexandra, wearing an emerald cape, and with a small, diamond crown, formed a remarkable contrast to her husband.

Before the end of the procession had passed out of the royal gallery the king had entered the House of Lords and the central feature of the day commenced. It was 2:15 p. m. before the king arrived in the chamber, where one of the most striking things was the curious reversal of the customary appearances of the sexes.

Here for once the women were somber-looking, in black, relieved only by the white arms and shoulders and the diamonds and pearls in their coronets, while the men, usually in black, were radiant with brilliant robes of scarlet and emerald. The peers and judges occupied the front benches.

The monarchy of this sea of red and white was varied by the uniforms of the ambassadors, who, seated on the blue chairs, with their sashes of blue, crimson

Salisbury on the Boer War

Repiles to Lord Kimberley's Attack on the Conduct of the Campaign.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—On the resumption of business in the House of Lords the lord chancellor read the king's speech and the marquis of Waterford, conservative, moved the address in reply. He is, perhaps, the youngest member whom the honor has ever been accorded. Lord Manners seconded the motion.

Lord Kimberley, liberal leader, after complimenting the mover and seconder of the address, said the house needed no further assurance that the king would follow in the steps of his mother but proceeded to express dissatisfaction with the conduct of the war in South Africa.

The government had failed him with appreciation. The government had failed him with appreciation. The government had failed him with appreciation. The government had failed him with appreciation.

Continuing, Lord Salisbury said the country could not hope confidently that the promise given by the king, that he would follow in his mother's steps would be fully and abundantly borne out. If so, it would be the greatest triumph for the principle of monarchy and for the name of the British empire.

Dealing with the war, Lord Salisbury thought there was nothing unusual in the length of the campaign. He referred to Lord Kimberley to the Indian mutiny and to the American war, where the situation was a great resemblance.

Where great enthusiasm and persistency existed in a country like South Africa, months must elapse before tranquility could be restored. Therefore, he did not believe there was any real ground for the discontent or apprehensions expressed by Lord Kimberley.

It was the business of the government to put its whole heart and strength to the task before it. A not unimportant but noisy faction tried to make out that the English people were not hearty supporters of the war and urged the government to adopt action short of that which would be successful.

When the crisis came and the day of action was at hand, the English people would be found ready to support the government to the hilt. He would be glad to hear Lord Kimberley repudiate all idea of asking the government to alter its conduct towards the enemy.

He was sure that the government would put its whole heart and strength to the task before it. A not unimportant but noisy faction tried to make out that the English people were not hearty supporters of the war.

The address was agreed to and their lordships adjourned until February 19. The address was agreed to and their lordships adjourned until February 19.

SAME TOPIC IN THE HOUSE Commons are Asked to Consider African Conditions Just as They Exist.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—In the House of Commons a message was brought in from the king thanking the Commons for their address of sympathy on the loss of his mother and their expression of dutiful attachment to his person.

The suffering and mortality caused by the influenza epidemic in India have been greatly increased by a recent rainfall, but I regret to state that in many parts of the province the epidemic is still spreading.
