Position of State Weighmaster Has No teacher by that board. Longer Legal Existence.

OPINION OF ATTORNEY GENERAL PROUT

Supreme Court's Decision on the State Board of Transportation Law Carried the Minor Affair Down Also.

LINCOLN, Feb. 14-(Special.)- Attorney General Prout today gave an opinion in which he held that the office of state weighmaster and his assistants have no legal existence. This opinion is based upon the decision of the supreme court, which declared the Board of Transportation act unconstitutional. He holds that according to the statutes the weighmaster can be appointed only by the transportation board, and as there is no board there cannot, therefore, be any weighmaster. The weighmaster in turn appoints his assistants and the same construction is placed upon their

William Mach of Omaha was recently named by Governor Dietrich for the posttion of weighmaster, but since the opinion was rendered today the appointment has been withdrawn. Attorney General Prout

I have received your recent letter in-forming me that there is a state weigh-master located at Omaha, with assistants at other places, and in this connection you submit the following questions: "I. Are the present acting weighmaster and assistants legally holding their respective offices."

If there is no such board is there any nority under the law for the appoint-it of a state weighmaster and assistants?

"4 If so, who is the appointing power?"

The legislature of 1891 passed "An act to create and regulate public warehouses, and the warehousing, shipping, weighing and inspection of grain." See session laws of 1891, pp. 363-383. Section 1, page 392, of this act is as follows: "That there shall be appointed by the State Board of Transportation in all cities where there is state inspection of grain a state weighmaster and such assistance as shall be necessary."

Law Was Plain.

The appointment of state weightnaster and assistants was no doubt made under the foregoing provision by the Board of Transportation. The section quoted from the warehouse act of 182 is part of a law "defining additional duties of the Board of Transportation in counties with public warehouses," and is one of the sections conferring such additional duties upon that board. The right of the weighmaster and assistants to hold and exercise their offices therefore depends upon their appointment by the Board of Transportation under the added powers conferred by the Board of Transportation under the added powers conferred by the Board of Transportation depended for its existence upon chapter ix, Session Laws of 1857. The validity of the act creating the State Board of Transportation was before the supreme court in the State against Missouri River Railroad Company.

It is clear from the decisions of the supreme court that the State Board of Transportation was before the supreme court that the State Board of Transportation had no legal existence in 1851 when the legislature attempted to confer upon that board additional powers, among which was authority to appoint a weighmaster and assistants. There being no such board, and the act of 1831 not purporting to create one, that portion of the statute relating to added powers of the board was necessarily ineffectual.

The whole chapter ix, Session Laws of 1857, creating the State Board of Transportation, being void, it did not repeal chapter lxv. Session Laws of 1885, providing for a board of railroad commissioners, and the validity of the act of 1885 was not impaired by the void act attempting to repeal it. The law relating to such altempted repeals has been stated thus: "Where a repeal of prior laws is inserted in an act in order to insure the unobstructed one ration of such act, and it is held unconstitutional, the incidental provision for the repeal of prior laws will fail with it." "Sutherisad on the such act, and it is held unconstitutional, the incidenta Law Was Plain.

Law of 1885 is in Force.

2. There is not at the present time a tate board of transportation which is unlifted to appoint a state weighmaster and assistants.

3. There is no board with authority to appoint such officers.

4. There being no office of state weighmaster there can be no officer with power to appoint one.

Free Labor Employment Office.

Senator Liddell of Douglas county introduced a bill in the senate today the object of which is to establish a free public employment office in metropolitan cities, and to provide for the appointment of a labor commissioner, and for licensing and bonding labor employment agencies. The bill provides for the appointment by the mayor of a labor agent to take charge at a salary of $100 per month to manage the free bureau. All other labor agencies are required to pay a license of $300 annually and give bond in the sum of $10,000.

The principal witnesses were Will Grost, a ranchman living near the Fullbart ranch at the time of the tragedy, and Sheriff Armstrong. Groat is the last one to have seen Fullhart alive, and the first to have found him dead. He testified to having been at the home of the deceased November 15 after his dog. Oxley was stretching wire on the posts and Fullbart was forty rods distant watering his stock. When he found the body November 34 he was but a short distance from where Oxley was stretching the wire on the 15th. About forty rods of posts had been set and two rods more wire stretched.

He testified that Fullhart always carried a weapon. He and Fullhart had trouble last. August and Fullhart pulled his revolver on him and he overpowered him and took it away from him and kept it until he promised not to shoot. Fillhart had the same revolver with him the last day Great saw him. He told of going with the neighbors to identify the cattle Oxley had sold at the Tierney ranch and those he left at the Gamble ranch.

Sheriff Armstrong's evidence gave in detail his examination of the body, from which he secured $7, and the search of the house where he found three or four guns and a sword. He testified that two tracks accompanied the sled out to where the fence was being built and told of tracking Oxley from Ar. pold, by the way of Gothenburg, to Omaha and Louisville, where he captured him. He stated that a few days after Oxiey's arrest he told him he would soon be able to clear the matter up, as his brother, George, and one of the Parks boys had gone to Merna to telegraph Charles C.
