Hennessy Leroyle, who has achieved great fame in the up-to-date comedy, "Other People's Money," will appear at the Dohany theater tomorrow evening, supported by a company of remarkable strength. The story is most laughable, acquainting us with a clerk who elopes with his millionaire employer's daughter, whom the parents desire to have wedded to another, a rich but exceedingly distasteful old hog dealer. The plan of the elopement is carried out at the instigation of the gir's father, who falls to discover that his own daughter is to be the heroine of the romance until all is over. In the company supporting Mr. Leroyle is Miss May Sargent, whose clever impersonation of Tielka Van Sittart, the scheming coquette, is pleasantly remembered from last season.

BACK TO THE PENITENTIARY

charles Stevenson's Return Ordered by Governor Shaw.

Because of the Theft of Tons of Hay He Must Fill Out His Unexpired Term and Forfelt All Claim to Good Behavior Time.

Charles Stevenson of this city, who a year ago yesterday was released from the penitentiary at Fort Madison, having been paroled by Governor Shaw, was last evening taken back to the penitentiary to serve out his unexpired term of one year.

February 28, 1899, Stevenson was conhard labor in the penitentiary. Stevenson obtained a $190 loan from A. A. Clark & ley will, it is estimated, be about $1,920. hitched on Broadway, while the man in charge was in a nearby store. Stevensor unhitched the team and drove it to in front of Clark & Co.'s office, where, representing the outfit to be his property, he succeeded in securing a loan of $100. After receiving the money, he drove the team and wagon to a side street, where he hitched it and went on his way.

Friends of the young man interested themselves in his behalf and on his promise to reform secured a parole from Governor Shaw after Stevenson had served one year of the two years' sentence. He was released from the penitentiary on March 22, 1900.

About a month ago Stevenson was arrested on complaint of J. F. Moore of In the Fifth Avenue thurch.

GRAHAM HELD FOR GRAND JURY, Indiana Sheriff Also Wants a Chance to Get at Him. C. J. Graham, arrested on complaint of his wife, had a preliminary hearing before Judge Aylesworth yesterday and was bound over to the grand jury. His bond was fixed at $500, in default of which he was committed to the county jail.

Fearing that the case in the police court might fall through or that her husband might succeed in giving bail, Mrs. Graham filed a second information against him on a similar charge in Justice Ferrier's court. Gussie Schule, the young woman in the case, when placed on the stand in the morning, declined to testify for fear of incriminating herself, but later in the day changed her mind and gave her evidence. Albert Bettles, the escaped prisoner from the Lancaster county jail in Lincoln, who was associated with Graham in the manufacture and sale of soap, was subpoensed on behalf of the state. He proved anything but a satisfactory witness and his evasion when asked a question led to considerable cross-fencing between him and Assistant County Attorney Kimball. The court had frequently to interfere and compel the witness to answer the questions put Sheriff Cousins received a telegram yesterday from Clinton A. Bondurant, sheriff of Plymouth, Ind., saying: "Hold John has been elected recording secretary and Kuhns, alias Charles Graham, until I can write. In his report as chairman of the buildreport, it was suggested that the new High school was not far enough advanced to be was cut out of the list.

Mr. Swaine and Mr. Keller expressed the opinion that the amount was excessive, especially as regards the Washington avenue school, which is across the street from engine house No. 3. Mr. Keller moved to amend the adoption of the committee's report by having each member suggest the amount he considered the schools ought to be insured for and then to strike an average by dividing the total of such amounts by seven, the number of members on the board. His amendment on being put to a vote falled to carry and the adoption of the committee's report carried, Shugart, Swaine and Keller voting against it. It was then decided to insure for three
