Presentiment of Death.

For several days previous to the apoplectic stroke which caused Judge Learn's death he seemed to have a presentiment of some impending disaster. afternoon, after luncheon, he went to the Elks lodge rooms and in conversation with some of his friends stated that he was feeling miscrable. He also said that he be-lieved his end would come suddenly and mexpectedly. "When it does come," he said, "I want the Elks to take charge of my funeral." At the time nothing was thought of Judge Learn's remark. Its 118 cculiar aignificance dawned upon the men who heard it, however, when a half hour later the news came that Judge Learn had Prepares for the End.

Since Judge Learn's death it has developed that the sleepless night he passed Tuesday, made almost unbearable because of the severe pains about his heart and chest, brought to him the belief that his end was near. Wednesday morning he went to his office and inspected all of his insurance policies, remarking that they were all paid up. Later he examined all of his bills and
