

“77” CHIN IN

To keep the chin in, means to keep it well drawn back horizontally. That causes what physical culturists call, “a lifted chest.” A lifted chest insures deep and full breathing, and hence pure blood and perfect circulation.

COLDS

GOOD LOOKING WOMEN.

A TALK WITH ONE OF THEM.

She Explains How She Keeps Her Complexion Clear With Cascarine.

New York, April 6.—“There is no use denying the fact,” said Mademoiselle Carrel, one of the noted skin specialists, “but many women ruin their complexions by using face powders, cosmetics and skin foods. Why, it is simply non-sensical to use things that only stop up the pores of the skin, aggravating the skin and making your complexion worse than if you had never used them. My rules for keeping the complexion clear and free from pimples and blackheads are as follows: Eat good, wholesome food, eat regularly, drink plenty of cold pure water, take at least eight hours’ sleep, take a cold sponge bath every morning, but above all, keep your bowels regular by using Cascarine.”

This gentle laxative is the best tonic for the bowels and liver; it removes all impurities from the system and makes a clear complexion. Every woman should have a bottle in the house. It is the best laxative tonic and the best blood purifier. Cascarine removes from the breath unpleasant odors arising from fermentative decomposition of food. It prevents the constipation which usually follows the use of other drugs of its class.

Go to your druggists today and buy a bottle of Cascarine. It comes in blue and white wrappers and is not a tablet or a pill. Doctors recommend it because it will not grip and because no other laxative is as good.

Price per bottle, fifty cents. If your druggist hasn't it, ask him to get it for you of his jobber.

HE INTERPRETETH A VISION

Colonel “Bill” Sullivan, Postoffice Inspector, Clears Up a Mystery.

POSTMASTER'S WIFE DREAMS OF ROBBERY

Sees an Ex-convict Riding the Tilt, but It's All in the Dream Which She Dreams She Dreamed.

Colonel W. T. Sullivan, chief postoffice inspector, with headquarters at Denver, has been in Omaha several days, appearing before the federal grand jury in the case of Frank J. Wells, the scholar and merchant who is accused of attempting to blackmail United States Senator Kearns of Utah.

Colonel “Bill” Sullivan—his full name is William Tecumseh Sullivan, but his friends are not sticklers for formality and he isn't either—let known unofficially in government circles as the dream interpreter for the postoffice department. It is difficult at a glance to understand how a prosaic old chap like Uncle Sam ever has occasion to employ a dream interpreter, yet there is at least one chapter in Colonel Sullivan's experience which demonstrates the occasional necessity of an interpreter of dreams in the government service.

It happened like this—but let Colonel “Bill” tell it in his own language:

“A few years ago in a little Kansas town the postmaster reported to the authorities that his office had been entered by burglars who, failing to find any currency in the tilt, issued money orders aggregating $400 and cashed them at another town in that vicinity. Appended to this commonplace report was a somewhat dramatic story of how the postmaster's wife had jumped out of bed on the very night of the burglary, exclaiming: “Yes, I am a dream believer, and being the only government attaché who has any faith, I bear the distinction of being the official dream interpreter. That's why I am here. But for your dream, some other inspector might have been assigned to this case.”

“The postmaster's wife related in minute detail all of her dream. Then I said: “I am now ready to interpret. Dreams frequently must be taken exactly opposite, and instead of a man of certain description entering the postoffice with skeleton keys at night, it was a woman who entered in daylight without the aid of a key, for the door was already open. That same woman issued the money orders and a few days later she appeared in disguise at another postoffice and cashed the orders. I see that woman now. If you had dreamed just a little further, I could tell what disposition the woman made of the money, but since I am unable to go that far with my interpretation, perhaps you can supply the missing chapter.”

“What do you mean, sir,” shrieked the woman. “I mean that you issued those money orders, and you'd better make good on once.”

“My bluff worked. A full confession followed. In order to outshine certain neighbors who possessed wealth the woman had taken this method of raising money. It was another instance of woman's vanity overwhelming her better judgment. She protested that her husband knew nothing of her guilt, and subsequent events proved the truthfulness of this statement. In less than an hour after the confession was made the woman repaid to the government, through me, all that she had secured on the money orders.

“Did I arrest her? No. I'm from Missouri, and I don't like the idea of a 200-pound man arresting a ninety-pound woman. That would be a breach of chivalry, sir.”

“And this is why Colonel “Bill” Sullivan is known all the way down from Mark Hanna to Tom Patterson as dream interpreter for the government.”

Colonel Sullivan is one of the most widely known postoffice inspectors in the United States. He has been in the service a long while, and has figured in several cases of national importance. Perhaps his most distinguished service to the government was the part he took in establishing a modern postal system in Cuba. He was one of the leaders in that work.

Take Colonel Sullivan on duty and he is business all over. Take him off duty and he is one of the best fellows you ever met, a genial gentleman, an entertaining story teller and game enough to do credit to his title of colonel—and the Grand Army of the Republic badge on his lapel bears testimony to the fact that William Tecumseh Sullivan was on earth while this country of ours was fighting itself away back in the '60s.

Ante Room Echoes.

At the Commercial club rooms the Masonic Library association held a meeting yesterday afternoon. The organization is composed of eight delegates from each of the four blue lodges of the city. It will have charge of the Masonic library which is to be established.

The initial step in the formation of the association was taken by Covert lodge, which for several years has maintained at Masonic temple a library of about 3,000 volumes and a reading room. The reading room and library have been at the command of all Masons in the city and at a recent meeting of Covert lodge it was decided to donate the books and reading room to the Masons of the city, providing the other lodges would approve the plan. The question was taken up by the other lodges and delegates elected to the central body, as follows: Nebraska lodge, No. 1, W. S. Heller, John D. Howe, J. J. Kennard; Capital lodge, No. 3, William Cleburne, W. A. DeBord, Alfred Kennedy; Covert lodge, No. 11, L. B. Hoyt, John W. Maynard, John N. Westberg; St. John's lodge, No. 25, W. W. Keyser, William T. Bourke, Clyde J. Barkus.

At the meeting temporary organization was effected by the election of W. W. Keyser as chairman and W. S. Heller as secretary. A committee consisting of W. W. Keyser, W. A. DeBord, Alfred Kennedy and M. J. Kennard was appointed to prepare articles of incorporation, rules and regulations for the association. The meeting adjourned to reconvene at the call of the chairman.

One of the largest gatherings in the history of Scottish Rite Masonry in Omaha was the annual festival of the extinguishing of the lights and the feast obligatory, on the evening of Maundy Thursday. For the first time since the lodge of Rose Croix was established in the city women were admitted to partake of the annual feast.

At the close of the feast the lights were extinguished to be relighted at special services to be held at 3 o'clock today.

The toasts were responded to as follows: “President of the United States,” Henry D. Neely; “The Supreme Council,” John J. Mercer; “The Grand Lodge of Masons of Nebraska,” C. H. Lobinsger; “To All Masons and Masonic Bodies of All Rites and Degrees,” C. H. Balliet; “To the Memory of Our Never-to-be-Forgetting Late Grand Commander, Albert Pike,” the guests; “To the Memory of the Brethren of the Rose Croix Whose Labors Here Below Ceased During the Present Masonic Year,” Luther M. Kubns; “The Ladies,” W. W. Keyser.

At the meeting of Calvary No. 1, Knights Templar, Friday night, officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Benjamin F. Thomas, eminent commander; Will L. Ritter, generalissimo; M. J. Kennard, captain general; John E. Simpson, senior warden; William H. Butte, junior warden; Carrol G. Pearce, prelate; Eben K. Long, recorder; William Robinson, treasurer.

It was decided that the commandery should attend in a body the services at the First Methodist Episcopal church tonight. Rev. A. C. Hirst, the pastor, is a Knight Templar and as a compliment to him the Brethren devotion of the Knights Templar of Omaha will be celebrated in that church.

Clau Gordon No. 63, Order of Scottish Clans, held its regular meeting in the Continental bank Tuesday evening. Mrs. Armstrong, the wife of a deceased Scotchman, presented the clan with a large portrait of Robert Burns the immortal bard, and there was an hour's harmony, many of the members contributing to the evening's amusement.

ter of interchangeable mileage, by which firms can secure a refund on less than 2,000 miles of tickets sold. The conditions briefly are that where a traveling man has severed his connection with a firm for any reason the firm may collect the rebate on the travel paid for by him on the purchase of 2,000 miles of additional tickets. This change is considered as a great victory by the members of the association, as firms have in the past lost considerable money in the way of rebates where travelers have not used 2,000 miles of tickets in the employ of one firm. The board of directors of the state division were present at the meeting and it was decided to hold the annual convention of the division at the Commercial club rooms in this city Saturday, April 27. Omaha Masons are looking forward with interest to a series of lectures to be delivered by Past Master Keyser.
