others. It is more blessed to give than re-ceive. What monument like the brave, honest, unselfish deeds of kindness for others, piled one upon another with the Master's ap-proval stamped upon them? What monu-ment like a tear or sigh of genuine sor-row? The obelisk stands in New York on allen shores and stares down from the heroic deeds of the mighty past. It is old, but who does it commemorate? The heroic deeds of great men may be engraved upon tablets of brass and carved upon sculptured marble, but the brass will tarnish and the marble will crumble! Let the memory of the unselfish deeds and sacrifices of an un-selfish life linger behind us and then we will be able to say in perfect truth ere we leave these mortal shores.
