HITS SMALL MONEY LOANERS

Judge Dunne Declares Assignment of Unearned Wages as Security Unlawful.

SAYS BROKERS CAN'T COLLECT IN COURT

Suggests that Such Proceedings Smack of Slavery and Involuntary Servitude of Unconscionable Nature.

CHICAGO, April 26.—The assignment of unearned wages as security for money loans was declared unlawful today by Judge Dunne. "To uphold such assignments," the court said, "would be to nullify the thirteenth amendment of the federal constitution, which declares against slavery and involuntary servitude."

The decision is an amplification of Judge Dunne's former ruling that public employees, because of their position, have no right to mortgage their unearned salaries. In his decision he extends his original holdings to all persons working on salary.

"The decision is emphatic in its terms against the pledging of earned salaries as a guaranty of payment for money borrowed," said Judge Dunne. "It practically makes it impossible for a broker who loans his money in this way to secure its collection in the courts."

One agent, speaking yesterday of the condition of the market, referred to a recent purchase of rental property by a man who is in the chattel loan business. This man's real estate investment, the agent pointed out, might net him, perhaps, 8 per cent net, which plenty of people in Omaha with money to invest were rejecting as too low. This agent was of the opinion that if a chattel loan man found real estate a profitable investment, it ought to be so to a larger number than are now in the market.

Horace Plunkett's Buildings. Work has been commenced this week on the row of brick houses at the corner of Seventeenth and Davenport streets to be erected by Horace G. Plunkett of Dubuque. On account of the difficulty of obtaining title to the fourteen-foot strip on Davenport street, only five houses will be built, instead of six, as originally intended. This strip along the north side of the lot, was vacated by the city in laying out the street, but although it lies inside the line of the sidewalk the city still holds the title. It was Mr. Plunkett's idea when he was here a few months ago that the city would be

MAINE Afloat IN THE FALL

She Will Steam Out of Havana Harbor Before Snow Flies.

ALL READY TO DO BUSINESS AGAIN

Confident Prop. of Contractor Who is at Work with Preparations for Raising Wreck—Damage Much Less Than Supposed.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Newton F. Chamberlain, who is engaged in raising the wreck of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor, and who just returned from Cuba on a short business trip, said today: "We expect to have the Maine afloat and ready for business again next fall. It was not so badly damaged when it was sunk as is generally supposed, and repairs can easily be accomplished. "We find," continued Mr. Chamberlain, "that the Maine has not sunk one-inch deeper since I made an examination of it two years ago. It lies perfectly level. In order to float the vessel, we shall first build a dam all around it and pump out the water. When the water has all been removed from the wreck, the hole in the bow will be repaired. Then when the water is turned in again, the vessel will rise to the surface and will be towed into the Havana docks, for a complete overhauling."

Announcements of the Theaters. There is one of the funniest comedy bills at the Orpheum this week that has been at that popular house this season. James O. Harrow, assisted by John Langstaff and a very clever company, offer a comedy, "The Thoroughbred," that sparkles with witty sayings and funny situations. The Bison City quartet are good singers and clever comedians. Their act is extremely funny and they are forced to respond to several encores nightly. The Macagons are clever acrobats and their plans in a French restaurant gives them ample means to show their work. Amiel is the best contortionist that has ever visited this city. He actually sits on his own head and does other contortions that are seemingly impossible. The Orpheum will give another amateur night May 11, which will be superior to any that has ever been seen in Omaha.

Charles H. Hoyt's best farce-comedy, "A Brass Monkey," will be the attraction at Boyd's theater tomorrow afternoon and night. It will be presented by a large company and a duplicated by the original scenery, mechanical effects and costumes. Mazie Trumbull plays Baggage.

Realty Men Busy

Items Showing Growth and Development.

Agents generally report small inquiry in real estate during the last few days, as compared with the average of recent months. During the last half of the week the number of deals closed has been very limited. The sale of Dr. Cameron Anderson's house to Mrs. J. L. Brown has been followed by another West Farnam street residence, that of P. W. Birkhauser to P. C. Healey. These sales and others which are pending indicate an increasing demand for higher-priced property than what has been sought for during the winter.

Most of the agents, however, report that they are kept busy on good deals, and though many of these are likely to fall through, there is some evidence now that the summer will see a number of good pieces of property change hands.

Another evidence of a more substantial tone to the market was afforded by a recent case where an Omaha man who has his eye open for good speculative bargains bought a valuable piece of residence property for a trifle over $4,000 and sold it within thirty days at a profit of an even $1,000. The price he bought at was a low one and he refused several offers which would have netted him $400 or $500 before he finally sold. In speaking of this transaction, the man who cleared up this $1,000 pointed out that it has only been within a short time that there has been enough interest in real estate to have made such a thing possible.

One agent, speaking yesterday of the condition of the market, referred to a recent purchase of rental property by a man who is in the chattel loan business. This man's real estate investment, the agent pointed out, might net him, perhaps, 8 per cent net, which plenty of people in Omaha with money to invest were rejecting as too low. This agent was of the opinion that if a chattel loan man found real estate a profitable investment, it ought to be so to a larger number than are now in the market.

Horace Plunkett's Buildings. Work has been commenced this week on the row of brick houses at the corner of Seventeenth and Davenport streets to be erected by Horace G. Plunkett of Dubuque. On account of the difficulty of obtaining title to the fourteen-foot strip on Davenport street, only five houses will be built, instead of six, as originally intended. This strip along the north side of the lot, was vacated by the city in laying out the street, but although it lies inside the line of the sidewalk the city still holds the title. It was Mr. Plunkett's idea when he was here a few months ago that the city would be successful progress of their scheme for the opening up of Twenty-fourth street. They anticipate no serious obstacle in the way of getting the grade established and the sewer laid on the south side of the viaduct, and when these two matters are accomplished the paving and the laying of the street car tracks will follow without any difficulty. Work on the viaduct is progressing satisfactorily. In the meantime the prospect of a street car connection with South Omaha by the Twenty-fourth street route, which has been pending west of there, and preliminary talk is being indulged in with a view to getting a spur of the east side park line extended down Hickory from Twenty-ninth to Twenty-fourth. Their idea is that the Street Railway company might consent to lay tracks down these two blocks and run every alternate car in this direction, leaving the other cars to run to Twenty-ninth and Walnut, as at present.

There is a very large number of people whose business takes them to South Omaha every day, and it is pointed out that many of them have to travel two miles or more out of their way to get to South Omaha by way of Leavenworth street. They say also that the Leavenworth street cars and also the South Twenty-fourth street cars will generally be crowded at the point where they meet, and that passengers who wish to transfer from one line to the other will find it difficult to obtain seats.

Auction of Special Interest. Next Wednesday's auction is in some respects of special interest to those who have been hoping for good results from this experiment of the Real Estate exchange. The property offered is a six-room house, one year old, with modern conveniences, and renting for about $15 or $20. It is only about two blocks from the Walnut Hill car line and is consequently a property of a kind which has been much sought after in Omaha recently. It is thought if any property will attract buyers this ought to.

The sale is subject to a building and loan association mortgage of about $1,000, but is entirely without reserve. The house was built by a contractor to sell and he has expressed his willingness to risk the chances of an auction to get his money out. The lot is 56x150, and the owner considers that the place would make a very desirable home for a small family.

This is the first time improved property has been offered without reserve, and if this sale is a success several agents stand ready to list other good pieces.
