RED CLOUD, Neb., May 30,-(Special Telegram.)-The Memorial procession was formed at 1 o'clock today and marched to the cemetery, with the Red Cloud band at the head, followed by old veterans and the returned volunteers of the late war, the speakers and noted visitors and citizens in carriages.

After the services of the Grand Army of the Republic at the cemetery came the ceremony of unveiling the monument erected to the memory of William A. Mc-Keighan. The monument was draped with flags and at a given signal the shaft was unveiled by Miss Edith McKeighan. William J. Bryan delivered an address, in which he spoke of the virtues of Mr. Mc-Keighan, his record in congress and the strong hold he had in the hearts of the people of this district and said the good has done to his state and country will be more enduring than the shaft of granite erected to his memory.

Mr. Bryan was followed by ex-Senator Allen with an oration in manuscript. Ex-Senator Allen's Speech.

Ex-Senator Allen reviewed the history and public works of William A. McKel-He told of his early struggles against poverty, of his untiring efforts in behalf of humanity. "I made an effort to bring the next convention to Omaha, but a great many of the delegates favored going to some extreme southern or western point and New Orleans was finally agreed on. The fact that Nebraska had never before been represented at a convention of the association undoubtedly had some influence in the selection."

Rev. Joseph Presson of Milford delivered the Memorial day address in the Auditorium this afternoon. Preceding this meeting brief services were held in Grand Army of the Republic headquarters. In Continuing, ex-Senator Allen said in part:

Almost Constant Illness.

Almost Constant Illness.

Mr. McKeighan was a most affectionate and devoted husband, and a loving father and true friend of his children, guidling well their footsteps from the perlious paths of infancy to the solid ground of mature manhood and womanhood. I have never known a man of purer aims or better heart than William A. McKeighan. Frail in bedy, the victim or almost constant illness, he possessed a true heart, a brilliant intellect and a broad and sympathetic nature. By his own energy be carved out a career which is the pride of his friends and worthy of their emulation. His was a nature that took within its ample grasp the misfortunes of all.

While not'a graduate of an established college or university, he acquired an education in the hard school of experience, by a wide range of reading, and by a close and systematic study of men and human institutions. He strove to build up, not to destroy, to make others happy, not miserable; to do good, not evil; to promote, not to obstruct the progress of his fellowmen. He believed in his country and its institutions; he sympathized deeply with the unfortunate and sought to lighten their cares. He was nother vindictive nor revengeful, but loved his friends and spoke well of those who despitefully used him. I never knew him to refer to any human being in slighting words.

William A. McKeighan was an orator of rare power and polished eloquence. He did not deal in light and thivial sayings, but his oratory was of a lofty, earnest and conscientious character. His eloquence of expression was such as to rivet attention and produce a lasting impression.

scientious character. His elequence of expression was such as to rivet attention and produce a lasting impression.

While physically weak and suffering pain as few men suffered, he did not fail to devote much time to an extensive course of discriminating reading. He possessed a rarely retentive memory and analytical turn of mind and it should be remembered that his judgment was formed only after mature reflection and was the solemn conviction of an honest conscience.

Mr. McKeighan may have had his faults, but they were of a minor character and did not affect his full discharge of every duty. Had he neen faultless he would have been more than human. He was a jovable companion, a charming entertainer and one with whom it was a constant delight to converse. He possessed great versatility, was facile, ready and forceful of expression and was mirthful and witty.

He belleved in a supreme being and in the final accountability of all men and, although not an active member of any church, was a conscientious and God-feating man, frequently observing that "We are all of one blood; there is one God, one Father of us all." He possessed a spirit of genuine independence and had the courage to do what seemed to him to be right, regardless of public opinion.

He had great desire to assist those in need, and to the extent of means at his comgressional career he spent much time procuring pensions for deserving soldiers and saliors, and for widows and orphans of the dead. Can it be a matter of surprise that one thus qualified should have won the hearts of those who knew him?

Marquis Ito Declines to Indo Other People's Foolish Doings-In Alarmingly Sick.

YOKOHAMA. May 11 .- (Via San Franisco, May 30.)-(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)-The cabinet deadlock continues, and there seems to be no way of breaking it, it being impossible to find a competent statesman willing to take the responsibility of forming a new government. The lesson will be a hard one for Japan, but it may prove eminently satisfactory. The thing to be most deplored is the blow which has been inflicted upon the nation's financial credit, the break-up having been occasioned by a matter of petty finance, which any other cabinet in the world would have easily adjusted in an hour. The trouble is that while the soundness of Japan's finances will compare favorably with that of any other nation of the west, the impression goes abroad that this country is in a state of perpetual impecunisity. The source of the trouble seems to be that the people have been educated during centuries of seclusion on principles of the most rigid domestic economy and find themselves unable to grasp now larger truths of world finance.

Accompanying the cabinet muddle comes the alarming report of Marquis Ito's illness, he having been seized on the 7th inst. with an attack of vertigo, resulting in a fainting fit, and indicating with other symptoms, the presence of serious brain trouble
