Within the tent there is the greatest improvement. The sounding board has been enlarged and the interior decorations are much more effective than at the fall carnival. The stage is artistically draped with flags and banked with palms. The entire north side of the tent is a mass of flags and all poles and ropes are wrapped in the national colors,

Welcome for the Leader.

When the hour for opening the concert arrived Mr. Belistedt stepped to the front of the stage and assured the large audience that it afforded him much pleasure to play again in Omaha. His speech was brief, but it called forth hearty applause, which died out as the great leader raised his baton and brought forth the sweet strains of Weber's "Jubel."

Mr. Bellstedt's band is practically the same organization that visited Omaha last fall. Only two changes have been made in instrumentation. Two string basses have been substituted for a tuba and a clarinet has replaced one of the three trumpets which did such valiant service.

The audience which greeted the band was a representative one. Among the crowds which promenaded during the inthe cadets plenty of work to do, but there termission were many society people. The interior of the tent was bright with dainty

The program was a very neat affair typographically and was remarkably free from blunders, although a brief description of some of the numbers, notably the "Falstaff" music would have served as a material assistance to many people unfamiliar with the score or the story.

The sturdy old "Jubel" overture opened Leffert, secretary. A public installation will be on St. John's day, June 24.

Thanks to the careful preliminary work of the committee on arrangements there was a very orderly and rapid entrance effected and people were seated with dispatch. This was a very valuable contributor to the general enjoyment of the music. When the third number came it seemed to be the unanimous opinion that the pavilion was far ahead of last year from the standpoint of acoustics. The extension of the upper part of the bandstand was a bappy thought and the effect of the ensemble was greatly enriched.

Mr. Bellstedt presented a number of his own compositions, one a graceful, restful sketch called "Dorina Bella," an in ermezzo, and another a very effective humoresque entitled "Diogenes Searching for an Honest Man." The piece last named is a clever conceit, full of the story and ending in a manner which leads one to suspect that Diogenes was disappointed, or else that he that yesterday morning he threatened to lost his lantern.
