Editor of The Bee Addresses Auditorium Advisory Committee.

DISCUSSES THE RECENT CRITICISM

Offers Public-Spirited Suggestions as to Kind of Building Omaha Needs-Advises Mature Deliberation.

A number of the members of the advisory board of the Omaha Auditorium company met with the board of directors yesterday at the Commercial club for the purpose of discussing plans for the proposed building. F. E. Sanborn, president of the company called the meeting to order and advice of the advisory committee on the of subscriptions which should be on hand subject. Members of the board had before the contracts are let, and the total taken exceptions to certain criticisms in cost of the building. The Bee and he therefore called upon Mr. a member of the advisory board, to express his opinions on the subject.

Referring to the criticism Mr. Rosewater stated that at times he felt like resigning from the board, as he disliked to appear to be opposed to persons on the same committee; that in all matters he desired to do right as a citizen and was bound to do He was ordered committed by Judgo Keyhis duty as an editor; that he as an editor must consider matters from a broad stand- district court bench, and he remained bepoint and not from the narrow grounds of hind the iron barred doors of the county self-interest, and that therefore he often jail for nearly an hour before he paid his desired to be free from the committee so line, which was liquidated under duress. that he could express ideas from the standpoint of an outsider; that he wanted the Auditorium enterprise to be a great success and not a little success, and that ters which should receive mature consider-

Suggestions as to Building. Taking up the form of building to be constructed Mr. Rosewater suggested that it should be wider and possibly not so deep, that if possible, and he believed it possible the company should secure the alley in the rear of the site and widen the building by twenty feet. His idea of an auditorium was modelled after the Mormon tabernacle friends, for in this campaign it is the repeaters who win victory. No need of being timid about election laws, for in the Auditorium should approach the oval in form. Omaha should have a unique building, not one modelled on the Kansas City plan. He believed that the committee should get good plans and get more money in the treasury before beginning active operations. Mr. Sanborn thought that the advisory board and the board of directors had not been close erough together in the work, of votes will be allowed first choice of and desired Mr. Rosewater to remain upon the committee, as the members needed his

He thought a building seating 5,000 persons would be a greater advantage to the city than one seating a much larger number.

Bruce Indorses Idea.

E. E. Bruce stated that he believed the plan suggested by Mr. Rosewater in regard securing the alley in the rear of the site was a most excellent one, "If you would ask me," he said, "whether or not to proceed with the plans at this time I would vote no. You have anticipated assets on hand of about $160,000; you have called for a 30 per cent assessment on $115,000 of stock, which would be about $33,000; you have received about $26,000 of this amount. I think we should have at least $250,000 in subscriptions before a spade of dirt is thrown, as along the present lines we would clean up about $210,000. I believe that of the funds subscribed for the Transmississippi exposition we collected about 70 per cent. That experience is what I base my present views upon. The estimate of the consulting architect on the cost of the building whose plans received the first prize is $140,000. Where will the extra $40,000 come from? In my opinion you must have at least $250,-000 on hand in subscriptions before you

Colonel C. F. Weller complimented the committee upon the excellent work it had done and was in favor of proceeding at once to the construction of the building, as with the committee in its prospectus had promthe committee in its prospectus had promised to begin work as soon as $150,000 was on hand. Compared with Exposition.

Mr. Sanborn thought that some of the people were losing sight of the fact that there was some difference in the character of the subscriptions received by the Transmississippi exposition and those received by the Auditorium company, for the reason that some of the former subscriptions were three years old before an attempt was made to collect them. "Take our present subscriptions," said he. "Today they are worth $150,000, a year from now they would not be worth $125,000," and for that reason he this pump. and that this amount had nothing to do with the amount of subscriptions on hand. He said that if this rule had been enforced it would have been impossible for the company to have purchased the site when . did, and that under the present circumstances any stockholder, one who held bu one share, could come into court and enjoin the letting of contracts until 80 per cent of the amount sufficient to pay for the same was in the treasury. Under existing conditions every subscription is a promissory note, payable on demand, and there is noth ing to prevent the board from calling an assessment of 100 per cent at this time.

It was suggested that the articles of in-

Powell some months ago had Procapdo arrested on a charge of stealing $145 from him. Procapdo was tried in the police court and arrest. Before the police returned Procapdo's money to him after his acquittal, Powell attached $145 of it, and the present suit in the district court enforce that attachment. Powell, the plaintiff, who accuses Pro-Judge Ogden, on cross-examination undertook to show that the cash might have been stolen by some one other than Procapdo. In the course of the examination George H. Bowman, counsel for Powell, interposed various objections to the questions and made side remarks that nettled Judge Ogden, who was standing at Ogden," said Judge Keysor, "you are fined $25 and costs for contempt of court and you are committed to jail until the fine is paid." Judge Ogden entered an exception to the execution of the court's order until after the trial under way was concluded and then accompanied Deputy Sheriff Weber to jail, declaring that he would fight out the issue with Judge Keysor in the supreme court. The imprisoned ex-judge sent for one of his office clerks, prepared a check for $28.65, the amount of the fine and costs, and paid it to the clerk of the court under duress, after which he was released.

"I propose to carry this contempt into the supreme court," said Judge Ogden as he stood in the jail corridor.

Hints at Great Improvements in Order to Aftract Suburbanites from Omaha

The good, hopest village of Benson whose civic pride has hitherto centered in its school, its church and its newly acquired car line, is now stirred with a new ambition. Almost within a week a change has come over the spirit of its dreams. Metropolitanism is in the air. The very essence of public improvement is to be seen and heard and felt, and, though there is as yet no physical manifestation of the change, the villagers already hear in prospect the muste of the hammer and the saw and the mellow plunk of the trenchdigger's spade. In short, Benson is about to reach out for all these attributes which distinguish the city from the hamlet-for sowerage, fire protection, electric lights, gas and public water works system. All this is because a rumor has reached the villagers that with these advantages theirs will become the most populous and wealthy residence suburb of Omaha. "All to give the big bugs of the city this protection and these comforts and conveniences and they will flock to us. Even as it is, they are headed this way." And they point to the new summer cottages of E. H. Sprague, J. J. Dickey and A. J. Love out by the Country club grounds and to others that are in process of building.

Fifty or more of the public spirited citteens met in the town hall last night and talked the matter over. The meeting was entirely spontaneous. No call had been issued for it. Indeed, it was estensibly a special meeting of the village board to they point to the new summer cottages of special meeting of the village board to consider the matter of buying a lot and building an engine house for the accommodation of the new fire equipment, which is expected to arrive July 15, but this issue was swamped under the bigger one hinted at to the gathering by the non-office hold-

They did not come out openly in favor of their project, and not once were such terms as water works, electric lights or sewerage mentioned. But they were One member opposed the erechinted at. tion of a $400 engine house "because we might decide to build a better one."
