STABS TRAINMASTER FOX

Jim Hugher, Discharged Switchman, Uses an Ugly Knife.

ESCAPES AFTER MURDEROUS ASSAULT

Seeks to Get His Job Back and When Refused Becomes Abusive-Fox Knocks Him Down and is Stashed.

W. H. Fox, trainmaster of terminals of the Illinois Central railroad at this point, was murderously assaulted last evening about 5:30 by Jim Hughes, a discharged switchman, who stabbed him in the abdomen with a knife. The assault was committed on the platform of the passenger depot. Hughes effected his escape after of August with his mother in this city.

had evaded arrest. Mr. Fox was removed to St. Bernard's hespital, where his wound was attended to. He was sleeping quietly last night under the influence of chloroform and the attending physicians are of the opinion that his injuries will not terminate fatally unless unforescen complications set in. Meager particulars of the assault were obtainable last night, as Mr. the assault and up to a late hour last night The smallpox quarantine on the Fuller residence on Harrison street and on the Dalton home on South Fifteenth street was raised yesterday.

Hughes was formerly in the employ of the Illinois Central in this city, but was discharged eight months ago. It is said H. A. Cunninghum and Dora W. Maraell, both of Omaha, were married yesterday afternoon in the office of the clerk of the district court by Rev. J. Y. Altchison. he laid his dismissal to Trainmaster Fox went to Kansas City, where he worked for the Santa Fe. He returned to Council Bluffs about three days ago. Shortly after 5 o'clock last evening Hughes called at Trainmaster Fox's office in the passenger depot and asked for a "clearance" card. Mr. Fox told him that the card had been sent for, but had not arrived. Hughes then left the office.

Fox Knocks Him Down.

At 5:24 Mr. Fox left his office and went to the platform to meet passenger train No. 5. After the train had pulled out he went toward the lower yard and encountered Hughes, who had evidently been waiting for him near Avenue B. What passed between the two is not known, but it is supposed that Hughes asked to be reinstated and on being refused made some threats, as Fox knocked him down. Fox then turned back toward the depot and had reached the end of the platform when Hughes overtook him. Fox turned round and as he did so Hughes lunged at him with

Leaves a Trail of Blood

After being stabbed Mr. Fox walked into the waiting room where he met Day Dispatcher Dietrick, to whom he remarked that he believed "that man had got him." With the assistance of Dietrick he managed to reach his office on the second floor, a trail of blood marking his progress. Physicians were at once summoned, who gave such temporary relief as was possible at the time and Mr. Fox was then removed in the ambulance to St. Bernard's hospital. Examination of the wound showed that the blade of the knife had entered the full length, making a cut about three inches deep, but missing the outer walls of the abdomen. Had the cut been a quarter of gages of both companies, all moneys for an inch deeper the doctors believe the wound would have proved fatal. Mr. Fox is a large man of strong physique and unless complications set in it is expected he will soon recover.

When the assault was first reported to the police it was stated that Al Kilgore, a well known switchman, had committed it and he was arrested three times within an hour before the police learned that Jim Hughes was the man wanted. Had not this mistake been made Chief Albro believes that Hughes could have been captured within a short time after the assault.

THIS SPOTTER IS DISCOVERED Conductors Don't Like His Offensiveness and Take Possession of His Report.

Taking one consideration with another a spotter's life is not altogether a happy The motor company, like the railroads, employs secret agents to watch and check up the conductors on its lines. Once in a while the conductors get wise and catch on to the spotters and the usefulness of the discovered spotters in this section of the country is a thing of the past. One of the motor company's spotters had the minfortune to be spotted by some of the conductors a few days ago and his willingness to surrender the reports which he had prepared for the company alone saved him from a severe drubbing at the hands of a number of indignant employes. The spotter in question had been working the several lines of the motor company assiduously all day and by night had prepared lengthy report to submit to the company. le happened to turn into an eating house on Broadway which is a resort of the motor company's employes to get a late lunch. Several conductors after a hard day's work dropped into the same place and several of them quenched the thirst that results from a hot day with a number of Having entered the numbers he placed the memorandum book back in his pocket and turned again his attention to the food before him. A whispered consultation was held among the employes of the motor company and then they descended upon him in a body. In language more forcible than polite they told him that they knew he was a spotter and submitted two propositions to him, for him either to hand over his report or else take a good drubbing which they were ready to give him.

Robbed of Their Garden Truck.

C. G. Pierce and his wife, living at Thirty-seventh street and Second avenue, had, by hard work, cultivated and planted with cucumbers and tomatoes an acre and a half of ground, from which they expected to derive a livelihood this summer. Up to Wednesday their expectations were being realized and they were making from $5 to $8 a day by the sale of their garden truck. Wednesday all their hopes were blighted, for during the previous night some miscreant had entered their garden patch and torn up a whole acre of cucumbers and tomatoes

The Pierces had had some trouble with a neighbor, named Ben Cash, and it is alleged that he had threatened to get even with them. He is said to have made the statement that the Pierces would not get a dollar out of their garden if he could help. Cash was arrested yesterday on an information filed by Pierce, charging him with malicious trespass and mischief. Pierce estimates the damage done to his garden at over $100.

The membership of the church of Latter Day Saints in central Iowa has been increasing rapidly in recent years and now regular camp meetings are held. The camp meeting for the Des Moines district will be held at Rhodes, beginning the 15th of the present month and continuing ten days. The district comprises fourteen counties in central Iowa and a number of the leading elders of the church will be present and several members will go from here.

Deny Consolidation.

Officials of the Iowa Central railroad deny that there is going to be any consolidation of that road at this time with the Minneapolis & St. Louis. The authorization of $25,900,000 of bonds is stated by them to mean that the road will be improved and extended in many directions and that it will be made a first-class road in every respect. They state that while consolidation may be effected some time it will not be at this time, nor until the Iowa Central is made just as valuable a road as the Minneapolis & St. Louis.

In doing so he in a careless manner took hold of the wire clothesline and was allowing it to slip easily through his hand as he walked toward the house He had not gone far until lightning struck the tree to which the clothesline was at tached. The electric current, passing down the line, struck Owens' fingers, passed di agonally down his body and off at his feet leaving its mark as it went. The hand and fingers are badly burned and a black line nearly an inch in width shows the current's track across his body. The soles of his shoes were knocked off and the grass under both feet was burned to a crisp. His son standing near by, was only slightly shocked by the bolt. Owens was immediately attended by his family and many friends, but did not recover consciousnes until after midnight, and only partially then.
