One of the Prattiest Contests of the Season Marred by Much Inseemly Wrangling by Both Sides.

The screaming bits of femininity and Murphy, p. 1 1 0 2 the faithful old cranks who gave up the circus and all its joys to go to Vinton Street park yesterday afternoon were well repaid for their efforts. The Flourmakers and the Blue Jackets gave one of the best exhibitions of the national game seen in Omaha for some time. It was a game that would be the delight of any true Yankee. It was anybody's until Stewart hit the air hard three times in the pinth inning. There were long drives, lightning stops and hairraising catches. Both teams swarmed around the umpire, threatening to kill him, and the spectators hissed the Oles and threw cushions at them. Fleming and Brashear were the stars with the "saplings," each of them getting three safe ones. The "Bluejays" outbatted the "Swedes," out their errors and inability to bunch hits tell the tale of woe.

Trouble began in the first finning, both for the Rourkes and for little Mr. Tyndali. Belden started things to moving by swatting a long one that netted him three bags. McCredie handed Cal a little easy one and calm and peaceful, but it was the calm before the storm. Congalton hit one back of first. Grandded Stewart woke up and after a hard run—for him—got his hands on it and then tried to dive out of the carriage gate. The ball was ambitious and outran him. Tyndall called the Miller safe and then a small-sized circus started right there on the field, with little Mr. Tyndall as the leading clown. Calhoun taiked too loud to suit the head ring. calm and peaceful, but it was the calm talked too loud to suit the head ringmaster, so he seat the heavy hitter to the went at it again. In the fourth the locals out, but Toman reached second. Alloway walked and so did Genins; then Fleming did exactly what Manager Rourke told him to-got a long single, scoring both men. But this ended affairs as far as Omaha was concerned. Stewart's men could get hits and men on bases, but then Swormsted, the heavyweight shadow, would loom up and end all hopes.

We all thought it was our game until the eighth, when Brashear led off with a single. Rohe let four bad ones go. It was up to Ferguson, who was substituted on first in Law's place when McConnell got a split finger. He is a pitcher and all thought he would be easy, but he wasn't. He smashed a liner to rightfield, scoring Brashear and winning the game. The "Bluejays" tried hard and that was all MINNEAPOLIS.

BUFFALO, N.
