STRANGER PURSUES WOMAN

Mrs. J. H. Glassman of Corby Street Tells a Startling Story.

SHE IS TO BE KIDNAPED

Police Are Working on the Mysterious Case, Which, They Declare, Sounds More Like a Tale of Fiction Than a Real Happening.

For twenty years Mrs. J. H. Glassman of $120 Corby street has been spied upon and repeatedly attacked by a mysterious man, described by her as large of frame, of dark complexion, with piercing black eyes and The attacks, of which there have been five or six, appear to be attempts at kidnaping, though why any one should want to abduct her now Mrs. Glassman ous stranger until last Saturday night. It does not know.

At one time Mrs. Glassman thought her swarthy Nemesis designed to make use of man for he called me Goldie as usual and her skill as a horsewoman, as her prowess besides I recognized his voice. The last attempt to abduct Mrs. Glass man was about 10:30 o'clock last Saturday night, when she was seized in the back yard of her home, half smothered under a coat which was thrown over her head and She continued to struggle, whereupon he were five nights. struck her a cruel blow on the head and she It was reported that there are about fifty

Police Are Investigating.

Mrs. Glassman was unconscious for two hours after the assault and is still suffering from the nervous shock. On the back of her head is a lump made by the butt of the man's pistol.

Mrs. Glassman is the wife of J. H. Glassman and the mother of two small children. A blende, with a wealth of golden hair, deep blue eyes and a slender, girlish figure, she would generally be considered handsome and to this she adds a pleasant address and a manner of easy self-possession. The house in which she lives is isolated, being well toward the top of the Corby street hill. It is a lonesome place for a woman to live without male protectors and as Mr. Glassman's duties keep him away from home of nights a great deal, she is alone, save for the baby and a 6-yearold son, most of the time. Still, she cannot bear the thought of moving, she says, as it was in this house that she was born and here she has spent her girlhood and the happiest days of her life.

Her maiden name was Pape. The older residents of the quarter will remember the early days, when this portion of the grazed on the hillside and little Ellen Pape herded them on her little blaze-faced pony. It was while thus engaged that she acquired such skill as a horsewoman. She knew no fear and was never so much at home as when in the saddle, racing at break-neck speed after some unruly a few days ago at the residence of his son milcher.

"I saw nothing of him after that until two years ago, when a man called at the house here and asked if a family of the name of Keeson lived in the neighborhood. The minute I set my eyes on him I recognized him as my old time 'shadow,' but tended not to. I told him I didn't know anyone named Keeson.

'Say, I know you all right,' was his remark, 'and I think you must know me.'

"I told him he was mistaken. 'Why,' said he, 'you surely remember the young man who used to sit on that mound and walt for you to come home from school. Well, I'm that young man and you are Goldie. The man heard it at the same in stant and ran away. When Mr. Glassman reached me I had fainted, but there was the cloth still hanging about my neck as proof that what I had experienced was reality and

Together we searched the lawn for traces of the intruder, and he found the crushed phial. It still had some of the poison in it. We had it analyzed and the chemist said the active principle was laudanum, though there was something else mixed with it, the name of which I forget. MANY COMPLAINTS FROM PURCHASERS

Premium Price is Paid by Housekeepers and Much Disappointment Results-Banana Market is in Midst of a Revolution.

The watermelon market of Omaha is experiencing a novel condition at this time and buyers of the finest looking fruit are receiving their goods with conditions attached. The trouble grows out of a large shipment of melons from Illinois last week, the first shipment from that state to this market. The melons were the finest-looking of any on the market and Saturday there was a large run upon them, in some cases premiums overruling price being offered.

A short time after the goods were delivered complaints began to come in. The melons were green. Not an occasional green melon, but every one was unripe. The wholesale dealers tried at first to make good with other melons, but the second lot was no better than the first. Then the condition was reported to the shippers. Other towns reported similar facts and the growers immediately sent Instructions to sell the melons on the was sold.

The banapa market is in the throes of revolution, as a new method of selling this fruit was put into effect this morning. The Fruit Dispatch company, which controls the output of bananas in this country, has sent notice to all buyers that by bunches, but by weight.
