McDonaid, the new Chicago amateur, by 4 up and 3 to play, but did not play out for a medal play score. play, but did not play out for a medal play score.

In the afternoon Douglas met James A. Stillman of Newport, R. I., and defeated the latter by 6 up and 5 to play, and playing out the bye hole Douglas made a 7t. His defeat of Stillman, who is one of the best golfers in the east, was done with surpassing case and at every stage of the game he held the honors. His score of 74 for the extended course, the playing length of which is 5,255 yards, will probably stand as a record for some time to come. He had hopes of a 72, judging from his splendid showing on his outward journey, but had work on the putting greens penalized him. Next to Douglas in brilliant piay was Oliver Perin, Ir., of Watchill, L. I., and from the outlook these two should meet in the final round for the principal prize, the President's cup.

Tomorrow the semi-final and final match play rounds of eighteen holes each will be played for the President's cup, Governor's cup and Consolation cup.

He, however, withdrew his objection when assured that the chart was not to be used as evidence.

Admiral Higginson, commander-in-chief of the North Atlantic squadron, was the first witness called. He gave his full name as Francis J. Higginson, rank as that of rear admiral, said he now was in command of the North Atlantic squadron, that he had, as captain, commanded the pattleship Massachusetts during the Spanish war and that for a part of the time the Massachusetts had been a part of the "flying squadron," of which Admiral Schley had been in command. He told of joining the fleet at Newport News, of going to Key West and then, on the 22d of May, of going to Cienfuegos, Cuba. Key West had been left on May 19, 1898, and Clenfueges reached

"What was then done to secure communication with the Cuban forces on shore?" Captain Lemly asked. "Nothing to my knowledge," the wit ness replied. "I did not see that anything was done, but I understood that information concerning the Cubans was received through Captain McCalla," Admiral Higginson said, in response to questions later, Conling Was Difficult.

He also told in reply to questions of the presence of the collier Merrimac and of the departure from Cienfuegos and the arrival a: Santiago on the evening of the 26th. In reply to questions, he said that the Massachusetts had at that time taken on about 130 tons of coal, but that as the weather was rough this was done with difficulty.

The witness also told of the fleet's leaving Santiago for Key West on the night of its arrival at the former place, and how, after steaming westward for some time, the vessels all, in response to Commodore Schley's signals, returned and steamed to within two or three miles of the mouth of the barbor.

"What happened to cause the decision to return to Key West?" the witness was asked. "I don't know," was the reply.

"What was the condition of the weather at this time for coaling at sea?" "It was not impossible to coal, I think." "Did you have any conference with the commanding officer in regard to returning to Santiago after you had gotten on the way to Key West ?" Acts Under General Orders.

'None. We acted under general orders. All we did was to follow the signals of the flagship-the signals of the commander-

The judge advocate 'hen asked: "What impression did the admiral's manner in that engagement make upon you?" Mr. Raynor of counsel for Schley objected to this question and after some contention the question was withdrawn. Judge Advocate Lemly stated before withdrawing the question that he considered the point as embraced in the precept and said that while the task was a disagreeable one he considered it his duty to press it and intimated that he would do so at another time. "Why did you not go in and destroy th Colon in the engagement on May 31?" Judge Advocate Lemly asked the witness. "Because we were not ordered to do Captain Lemly announced that he had no further questions to ask of Admiral Higginson and counsel for Admiral Schley stated they had no ques tions to put. It was then stated by Captain Lemly that the court had some questions of its own to ask. These were written and the first was concerning the elevation of the guns during the bombardment of the Colon, May 31. The reply was that at first theye were 7,800 feet and laterly 9,000 feet. We don't say in distance of from seven to ten miles out, the your opinion."

Judge Raynor made an extended argument, quoting many legal authorities, against the for luncheon,

Promptly at 2 b'clock the court was called to order by Admiral Dewey and Mr. Raynor resumed his argument in opposition to the admissability of questions intended to call out the opinions of witnesses.

He contended that if testimony giving opinions should be admitted the inquiry would be interminable. If, for instance, opinions were to be taken as to the propriety of the loup made by the Brooklyn, practically the entire navy could be summoned, as all its members were experts and each would have his opinion. Witnesses were examined to relate facts; the court to give opinions.

Replying, Judge Advocate Lemly quoted the record in the trial of Admiral Keppel, arguing that it was entirely within the discretion of the court to decide whether the opinion of a witness who had been on the ground should be called for by the court. He thought, however, that "the weight of authority was against asking the opinion of a witness."

The court then withdrew its question as o Admiral Higginson's opinion as to whether Commodore Schley had done all that could be done to destroy the Colon while that vessel lay at anchor in Santiago bay. Another question put by the court was as to the distance the squadron lay out from Santiago and the reply was that it was three or four miles out during the day time and two or three miles at night. In reply to a question he said that after the hombardment of May 31 no further offort had been made to destroy the Colon because the vessel had gone inside the harbor. Admiral Higginson was then excused and Captain C. N. Chester, who commanded the Cincinnati during the Spanish war and who now in command of the Naval War colege at Newport, was called.

Captain Chester related an interview he had had with Admiral Schley on board the Brooklyn off the south coast of Cuba on May 20, 1898. He had told the admiral that from his examination of the charts he believed coaling feasible, but he thought it would be done under great disadvantages. He had expressed the opinion that boats might be used or that a more secure point might be gained under the less thirty miles to eastward.

Major Wood Testifies

Major Thomas N. Wood of the marine corps, who commanded the marine force on the Massachusetts during the Spanish war, testified to the circumstances connected with that vessel's operations during the siege of Santiago. He said that the second day after Santiago bay was reached by the flying squadron be had seen the Cristobel Colon lying inside the harbor; that there was at that time another Spanish vessel of the Viscaya class partly visible. He thought both were in view for three or four days.. The witness also said that when Admiral Schley had come aboard the Massachusetts, previous to the bardment of the Colon on May 31, he had heard that officer say to Captain Higginson: "We are going in, but we will not go in sufficiently near to endanger the vessels." He had been told that the distance was to be 10,000 feet.

After the bombardment ceased, Major Wood said, the Spanish shore batteries continued to fire at the American ships At this point he had gone forward where he had again seen Commodore Schley. "Did you then hear any orders or in structions?" he was asked.

"I then heard some one say, and I be lieve from the sound of the voice that it was Commodore Schley: 'Starboard your helm and let's get out of this," answered the witness. This had occurred on the port side of the conning tower, he said, and the commodore had been about eight feet from him.

Operations of the Texas. Captain Harber, now naval attache at Paris and St. Petersburg, who was executive officer on board the Texas during the Spanish war, was asked, in the absence of Captain Philip, to give a detailed account of the operations of that vessel during the part of the flying squadron and the witness said that when they steamed for Cienfuegos the flagship signaled "We go to Clenfuegos to bag the Spaniards; wish you good luck In reply to questions he said that when Clenfuegos was reached earthworks were discovered there, but no effort was made to destroy them.

Captain Harber was questioned concerning the plans of the battle, but he said that, notwithstanding he would have taken command in case of the incapacity of Captain Philip, he received no directions from the commander-in-chief. He had heard of no plans in case the enemy should

The witness said that while laving off Cienfuegos he with others had seen lights from the shore, which, from their nature, had seen that vessel immediately after it they took to be signals, but that no attention had been paid to them until the port bow of the Texas, about 800 feet dis-24th, when the Marblehead had arrived and he understood had responded to the signals and communicated with those on shore. He also said the Texas had been in no great need of coal while lying off Cienfuegos, but that it could have taken more and would have been glad to get it. The lows had coaled, he said. Describing the sail to Santiago the witness said there had been rough weather, but that the Texas could have made better time than it did. He said that when the squadron arrived in sight of the Yale and other American ves sels off Santlago on the evening of May 26 all the vessels cleared for action, thinking they were vessels of the enemy. When had signaled Captain Wise of the Yale, saying: "Have you got them in there?

gestion was to stop eating and many think so still. But the only trouble in that kind of treatment is the fact that to stop cating means to stop living, and we can hardly call that a cure.
But since Kodol Dyspepsia Cure has become known the whole method of treating indigestion has been changed. It digests what you cat and permits you to cat all the good food you need and gives the stomach perfect rest; and its use constitutes a plain common sense method of curing dyspepsia and indigestion.
