The second Myers trophy was contested for at the Omaha Gun club grounds yesterday afternoon by members of that club. This trophy is a gold-plated candelabrum, standing about twelve inches high and having three prongs. The trophy was won by W. D. Townsend, who killed fifteen birds straight.

The feature of the shoot was the bad luck of Frank Fogg, who killed every bird and saw two of them fly across the fence before dropping dead.

The eleventh bird of Charles Johannes was one of the most difficult that ever flew from a trap. He missed it, thus destroying a clean score. Johannes killed fourteen birds with eighteen shots, the best single-barrel work of the day. Following is the score:
