STRANGE BABY ON HIS HANDS

Albert Dingman, Baker, Finds Sleeping Infant in Hallway.

DAUGHTER CRIES "WHAT'L MAMMA SAY?"

Head of the House Rushes to Police for Relief from Scandalous Perplexity—Detective Weir Solves the Mystery.

Albert Dingman, a baker of 28 North Main street, rushed into the police station yesterday afternoon in a great state of excitement. Somebody had left a strange baby at his house and as he was in no way responsible for the youngster he wanted the police to lose no time in finding its mother or the person who had left it at his home.

"Good heavens," he said, "what will my wife think when she comes home? The baby doesn't belong to me. I am not responsible for it and I am sure I don't know why anyone should want to scandalize me so."

When Dingman became somewhat collected he told the police that on returning from work yesterday afternoon he found the infant in a baby carriage in the hallway of his house. As there was no one at home he took it indoors. His daughter arrived home a few minutes later from visiting a nearby neighbor. She professed to know nothing about the little one or how it came to be where her father had found it.

This settled the matter with Dingman and without waiting to put on his hat he rushed off to the police station. When he told his story the detective Weir was detailed on the case with instructions to locate the owner of the infant as soon as possible.

As a starting clue the detective decided to get a description of the baby and with that purpose in view went direct to the hospital where the baby had been born. He and she, seeing the joke had been carried far enough, informed him that the baby belonged to a married friend of hers who had left the city on a short visit and during her absence she had promised to take care of the little one. She said her father appeared so excited about finding the child that she kept up the joke just for fun.

Detective Weir was not at all pleased at being sent on a wild goose chase and he almost frightened the young woman into hysteria by threatening to arrest her.

WANTS HALF HIS MONEY Mrs. Kunigunda Richter Sues John Patterson for Five Thousand Dollars for Breach of Promise.

Mrs. Kunigunda Richter brought suit in the district court yesterday to recover from John Patterson the sum of $5,000 as salvage for her feelings and affections, which she claims have been severely wounded by Patterson failing to carry out his promise to marry her and wed another woman instead.

Mrs. Richter sets forth in her petition that Patterson began paying her attention and keeping company with her in June, 1900, taking her boat riding and to the parks, and frequently visiting her at her home. As a result, she says, Patterson asked her to become his wife and on her consenting promised to marry her during the AK-Sar-Ben carnival in the fall of that year.

Change in the Iowa Law Suggested in Annual Report—Collateral Inheritance Tax Figures—Court Favors Convict Who Has Just Died.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, Oct. 23.—(Special.)—Gilbert S. Gilbertson, treasurer of state, surprised everyone by making a recommendation in his biennial financial report on the condition of the state treasury placed on file today, in favor of the state taking interest on the deposits of money in banks belonging to the state.

This case is one of the four in which Nebraska creditors assigned their claims to put an end to this practice if possible and directed its local attorneys to defend the case.

The answer filed set out that the claims were obtained by Fulton, the person bringing suit, in the state of Nebraska for the express purpose of bringing them to Iowa to bring suit upon them in direct violation of the Nebraska statute and raises the question of constitutional right, claiming that the practice complained of operates to deprive the state of the equal protection of the law and to deprive them of their property without due process of law and further to abridge their privileges and immunities.

ONE YEAR'S CRIMINAL RECORD Clerk Reed Files Annual Report of Cases in the District Court.

Clerk Reed of the district court completed and forwarded yesterday to the secretary of state his annual report of the criminal cases for the year ending September 30, 1901. The total expense incurred by the county on account of criminal prosecutions in the district court for the year amounted to $3,038.34. This is considerably above the average and is due to the large expense incurred in the prosecution of Thomas Senter of Memphis, Mo., who was tried and acquitted on the charge of forging a deed whereby he was alleged to have secured a loan of several hundred dollars from Louger & Louger of this city.

Collateral Inheritance Tax. The receipts from the inheritance tax for the period closed exceeded the receipts for the previous period by $145,665.02 and the revenue for the year was $1,815,747.78 in importance when compared with the others given in the table. Two years ago it was the sixth. The law has been amended and further enactments made so that the collection of this tax is now rendered more effective.

The bank will, therefore, have to pay the money again. Thompson was 78 years old and had been in the penitentiary for more than thirty years for the murder of two women and placing their bodies under the ice in the Mississippi river.

KODOL Digests what you Eat Dyspepsia Cure

The process of digestion is simply explained. In the mouth, food is masticated and mixed with saliva containing a digestant called ptyalin. In the stomach, it is acted upon by gastric juice containing pepsin, which digests albuminous foods. In the intestines, pancreatin is added to digest fats and starches. Indigestion always indicates an insufficient amount of one or all of these digestants. At first thought it seems proper to abstain from foods not easily digested, but reflection shows us that while this affords relief by giving the weakened organs less to do, it only makes them weaker by giving them less nourishment. If you suffer from indigestion, the only right thing to do is to eat a generous variety of food and digest it by using such a preparation as KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE, which contains all the known digestants, and completely digests what you eat.
