DAVE MERCER GOT THE MONEY

Mystery of a Two-Hundred-Dollar Greater American Exposition Draft.

GIVEN TO HIM TO GET HIM ENTHUSED

Some Inside Information Brought Out During a Suit Before Judge Baxter Concerning the Company's Finances

In the case before Judge Baxter brought by the receiver for the Greater American Exposition to recover $250 on a stock subscription by Edward Rosewater, the subscription having afterward been cancelled by the board of directors, a verdict was returned for the plaintiff on instructions from the court on a question of law.

During the examination an interesting point was brought out with reference to a receipt produced by Mr. Blackburn, an attorney for the exposition receiver, relating to a draft for $200, given to Mr. Rosewater by Frank Murphy for expenses on one of the trips to Washington in the interest of the exposition. On the first cross-examination Mr. Rosewater could not recollect the purpose of the draft, but on being recalled and questioned he testified that it was given to Congressman David Mercer.

"Why in this receipt here," asked Mr. Blackburn, "you say 'received from Frank Murphy draft for $200 to pay expenses east in the interests of the Greater American Exposition'?"

"Answer—I received a draft. I carried the draft with me. It was a New York draft. I signed my name on the back and handed it to Dave Mercer."

Question—This says the trip in November covered a tour to Chicago and Washington, thence to New York and return by way of Washington?

"Answer—Well, it was a session of congress, or just before congress would meet, and I had to see Mercer and get him in motion and then come back again about some other matter. I don't remember what."

Question—So that trip in November was made at the instance of the Greater American Exposition for the purpose of carrying this draft to Mr. Mercer?

"Answer—Not only that, but arranging the preliminaries and getting him enthused a little bit.

Question—What expenses did you know Mr. Mercer would be at there?

Answer—No, given to him to spend, if he could use it to advantage for the exposition. That was all there was to it.

This is Life Insurance.

There are more than two million men in the United States who are insured in the regular old line life companies. The total sum of their insurance is something over six billion dollars. In other words, two million of the most prudent, astute and worthy men in the nation and their families are creditors to an average of some three thousand dollars each of the most trustworthy and substantial financial organizations the world has ever known.

This six thousand million dollars is all to be paid, plus dividend earnings if so agreed, to these same creditors. Some of it may not be payable for half a century hence, and some of it will be paid today, perhaps at the very time these lives are being read.

Payments under the policy contracts will take place every hour of every day until the last dollar shall have reached its rightful and satisfied owner.

No money that ever has or ever will be collected, guarded, increased and disbursed in any other manner has or can play a part in mankind's behalf comparable in importance and benefit to this. Every cent of it is either for the use of these same two million men in their later and non-productive years, or for their families when death shall have summoned these wise providers from the scenes of earth forever.

Mortality Statistics.

The following births and deaths have been reported to the Board of Health for the twenty-four hours ending at noon November 8:

Births—James Tunnicliffe, 3865 North Twenty-sixth; boy, George Hill, 3928 North Twenty-third; boy.

Deaths—Alfred Peterson, aged 50 years, 29 Jackson street; Baby Christensen, aged 4 months, Herman, Neb.

FIRE ESCAPES ARE NEEDED

Grand Jury Takes Up the Matter for a Thorough Investigation.

THIRTY OMAHA BUILDINGS INVOLVED

State Labor Commissioner Watson and Building Inspector Carter Are Called On to Tell of Their Inquiries.

The grand jury has begun a wholesale investigation of buildings which are not provided with fire escapes in accordance with the provisions of the state law. Building Inspector Carter, Chief Sitter of the department, Building Inspector D. M. Clark of South Omaha, and Commissioner Watson and a score of other witnesses have been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury.

In Grand Island and other Nebraska cities grand jury investigations of buildings which owners refused to comply with the provisions of the statutes requiring fire escapes have brought about desired results and the state labor commissioner believes that similar action will be taken in Omaha. Property owners who violate the law may be prosecuted by county attorneys and subjected to heavy fines. While in Omaha a few weeks ago Labor Commissioner Watson found that there are at least thirty buildings in the city which should be equipped with fire escapes. The law requires that any building three stories or more in height, which is not fireproof and is not used exclusively as a private residence, shall have fire escapes. Park and Castellar schools are among the buildings which come within the provisions of the law, but have not been provided with the metal ladders required by the statute.

The Board of Education assured the labor commissioner that these buildings would be equipped with fire escapes within sixty days.

There is considerable controversy as to whether a number of buildings in the city are fireproof according to the provisions of the ordinance. The Boston store and McCasue block are two of the buildings whose owners have resisted the orders of the labor commissioner on the ground that the structures are of fireproof construction. The Sacred Heart academy and Mount St. Mary's academy, two buildings which are not equipped with ladders, will be provided with the necessary fire escapes within a short time.

Danger is Real.

"After the disastrous fire which occurred in the Patterson building two years ago I do not understand why any property owners will resist the efforts of the labor commissioner to have all buildings equipped with adequate fire escapes," said Building Inspector Carter in discussing the grand jury investigation. "The fire in the Central hotel two weeks ago would have resulted in the death or serious injury of several people if the building had not been equipped with fire escapes. It was difficult for the guests of the hotel to escape as it was. Owners of buildings contend that where there are two stairways, or a stairway and an elevator, there is no need for a fire escape. The Central hotel fire shows the folly of this argument. The hotel had an elevator shaft and a stairway at different ends of the building and still there was no chance for the people on the third floor to escape to either."

"Most of the buildings in the central portion of the city are now provided with fire escapes. In the wholesale district the property owners have complied with the provisions of the law quite generally, but there are many tenement houses which are still without fire escapes. Many rooming houses on Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets are without metal ladders. There are also some buildings in the vicinity of Twenty-fourth and Cuming streets which have not complied with the law. All told I think there are thirty buildings in the city which are still unprovided with fire escapes.

South Omaha Suffers.

"Where the condition of buildings is brought to the attention of grand juries the responsibility for the condition of the buildings is shifted from the shoulders of the state labor commissioner. The ordinance of the city of Omaha requiring fire escapes is identical with the state law. Consequently the grand jury's action will also free the city building inspector from responsibility. People respect the action of officials and it is likely that all violators of the state law will signify their intention of constructing fire escapes without the formality of prosecution in court."

DECLARES FIRST DIVIDEND

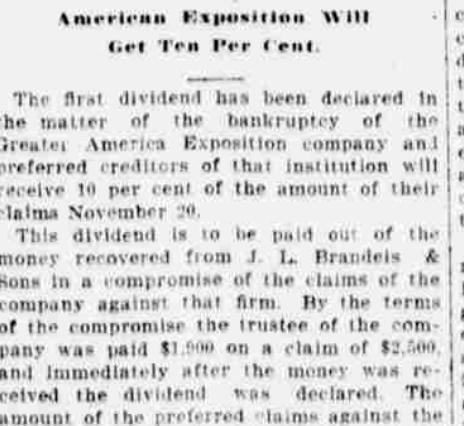

Preferred Creditors of the Greater American Exposition Will Get Ten Per Cent.

The first dividend has been declared in the matter of the bankruptcy of the Greater American Exposition company and preferred creditors of that institution will receive 10 per cent of the amount of their claims November 29.

This dividend is to be paid out of the money recovered from J. L. Brandeis & Sons in a compromise of the claims of the company against that firm. By the terms of the compromise the trustee of the company was paid $1,000 on a claim of $2,500, and immediately after the money was received the dividend was declared. The amount of the preferred claims against the company is approximately $16,500, and the payment of 10 per cent, together with the payment of certain accrued costs of the administration of the bankrupt's estate, will consume about $1,700 of the money received as a result of the compromise.

The trustee has recovered judgments against several other subscribers to the fund, but in every instance where judgment has been recovered the cases will be appealed to the supreme court.

DOCKET FOR FEDERAL COURT

November Term Has a Heavy List of Cases Pending.

PETIT JURY MAY WORK SIX WEEKS

Conditions such that the Talesmen Will Likely Be Busy Until After the Holidays on Minor Cases.

The November term of the United States district and circuit courts for the district of Nebraska will convene Monday morning. The civil docket is a heavy one and for this reason it is expected that the petit jury will be present longer than usual, possibly being held until the beginning of next year.

There are on the docket of the circuit court at this time 110 law cases and 145 equity cases. The most important case on the law docket is the suit brought by E. E. Balch against the Pullman Sleeping Car company to recover damages for the injury received by him at the time he was robbed on a train running between Chicago and Omaha, at which time the robbers assaulted him with the butt of a revolver. This suit was started in the district court of the state, but was transferred to the federal court by the defendant.

On the criminal docket there are over 200 cases, some of which cannot be tried at the coming term, as the defendants have not been apprehended. There are about thirty cases certified by the United States court commissioners to the grand jury for consideration at this time and about a dozen others will be presented by the district attorney upon the application of internal revenue agents, postoffice inspectors and other secret service officers of the government. Of these cases one or two are against persons already under arrest charged with offenses of different character.

The grand jury will be organized Monday morning if the members arrive in time. Immediately after this is done Judge Munger will call the docket for the assignment on account of my election and thought I could afford to repulse the colored vote. But I may want to run for office again some time."

Those who witnessed it say it was one of those clinging, adhesive, Olga Netherole buses, and that it reflected great credit upon his honor.

Herman Martin Says His Wife Throws Knives and Other Things at Him.

Herman Martin does not care to pose as a divorcee from a wife who is charged with having put in her spare time throwing dangerous weapons at her husband.

In his application for divorce from Mary Martin the plaintiff states that he was married September 17, 1897. He charges Mary with having an unenviable temper and alleges that he was afraid to live with her, as she was given to throwing all sorts of dangerous weapons in fits of anger. In less

LITTLE BISMARCK MAKES GOOD

Kisses the Bride with Enthusiasm Even if Her Complexion is Darker Than Tan.

Edie Williamson and Walter Galloway, both born that way, were married Thursday evening at Labor Temple by Justice Altstatt. Walter, the groom, is as black as the thoroughbred E. e. stock that share his name, while the complexion of the bride is a soft magenta. "Away as the dusks of many perfect days."

"I pronounce you man and wife," said Little Bismarck.

The groom kissed her and a maroon flush lit up her cheeks. He then fumbled in a big leather pocketbook. "All done but payin' the damages," he said.

"But don't I have to kiss the preacher?" asked the bride.

"Of course," said a witness.

The bride placed the tips of her fingers beneath Little Bismarck's chin and raised his cherub-like face to hers. He looked frightened and seemed about to heave then glanced at the $5 bill in the hands of the groom.

"What was I to do?" he asked in explaining it to several of his friends. "If I hadn't they'd have said I was swelled up on account of my election and thought I could afford to repulse the colored vote. But I may want to run for office again some time."

Those who witnessed it say it was one of those clinging, adhesive, Olga Netherole buses, and that it reflected great credit upon his honor.

CRIZER PROMISES TO PAY UP

Expressman Says He Will Take Care of the Checks Issued by Bishop.

H. A. Crizer, formerly proprietor of a line of express wagons, with an office at Eighteenth and Charles streets, was arrested yesterday on charge of being an accomplice of James Bishop in the utterance of a half-dozen worthless checks.

When Detectives Savage and Donahue called at the Crizer home, 2606 Blondo, they found Mrs. Crizer alone in the house.

"My husband hasn't been home for a couple of weeks," said she. "He left home late last month because I wanted to say grace at each meal. I am a member of Rev. Charles W. Savidge's church and have long been a Christian and I believe it my duty to hold family prayer and return thanks at table. But I have never been able to interest my husband in religion. He finally threatened to leave home if I didn't stop praying in his presence. I carefully weighed the two alternatives and asked God to help me decide and I believe that when I continued to pray and to say grace before meals I was doing as God would have me do. My husband went away, but I am still praying that he may yet be led to see the light."

The detectives were compelled to search elsewhere for Crizer. When found he said the checks passed by Bishop were his; that he had an account in the bank and didn't know it was overdrawn. He had several hundred dollars in the bank which the insurance companies had paid him when his express office burned down. He agreed to make good the deficiency and was released. He denies that religion was the sole cause of his leaving home.
