Wave of Prosperity Still Spreads So Generally that Little Complaint is Heard Even from the Corn District.

BETTER DEMAND FOR CLOTH

Manchester Textile Market Enjoys Better Business—Poor Prices Secured for Yarns.

NEW YORK. Nov. 17.—(Special)—Henry Clews says:

Interesting developments occurred during the last week, one of which had been long expected and did not exert the effect anticipated. Chief of these in importance, of course, was the final announcement of the settlement of the Morgan-Hill-Harriman controversy.

While there are points of weakness in the new plan among railroads interested in canning, the dividends can be expected by a narrow margin for some time to come, yet the arrangement is of great importance.

The actual transactions on the stock exchange was insignificant. Home rails were dead and mining shares almost at record low prices. Industrial generally suffered in sympathy with the tobacco war, which is daily assuming a more bitter aspect.

Anticipation of Larger Receipts Next Week Starts Decline.

ALL THE MARKETS SHARE IN DOWNFALL

Wheat Starts in to Brave It Through, but is Finally Forced Down

—Corn Gives Up Early.

CHICAGO. Nov. 16.—Weakness in corn as a result of a slumping cash market and expected larger receipts next week brought lower prices in all grades and December futures were turned down.

At present no effort is being made in several quarters to revive the Indian demand, but without appearance of success.

At present the market is still liberal, cheery, shirking, and the order books of many producers are filled for four months ahead.

Yarns have taken a fair amount of business at recent rates; nevertheless, the price of raw cotton is still high, so that the United States imports are still protecting the Union.

Yarns were more active at poor prices and users do not appear to be anxious to secure supplies in advance.

Averts a Real Disaster.

This ends a struggle between rival interests over larger issues and vaster amounts of capital than Wall street has ever before seen. An open rupture would have been disastrous to the entire nation concerned, but to the whole market and might easily have involved us in serious dangers.

The result is to put only a respite, if it is positively reassuring; it marks a great step forward in the community of interest.

The Morgan party did not gain control of the Hill and Morgan party maintain control of the properties in which they are primarily interested.
