

LUNCH WITH GENERAL DODGE

Omaha Friends of the Railroad Builder Meet Him Informally.

PLEASANT RECEPTION AT OMAHA CLUB

Men Who Helped Make Omaha and the West Sit Down Together for an Hour's Social Intercourse.

An informal reception and luncheon were given at the Omaha club at 1 yesterday afternoon in honor of General Grenville M. Dodge. Although General Dodge still retains his home in Council Bluffs, he spent most of his time in New York. He is paying a brief visit to relatives in Council Bluffs and his friends in Omaha were unwilling to have the general return to New York without meeting the men with whom he was associated while building the Union Pacific and during the civil war.

Forty-seven years ago General Dodge was a resident of Omaha for a short time. Then he moved to Council Bluffs, where he has maintained a home since. He entered the war with an Iowa regiment and was advanced to a major generalship. He distinguished himself before Atlanta and won special commendation from General Grant. General Dodge is president of the Army of the Tennessee.

Dr. George L. Miller acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the men who spoke at the conclusion of the lunch. The following men were seated at the table: John C. Cowin, N. P. Dodge, Jr., W. R. Kelly, C. W. Lyman, George L. Miller, H. W. Yates, H. E. Palmer, J. S. H. Patrick, C. J. Greene, H. T. Clarke, Jr., J. M. Woolworth, W. D. McHugh, G. W. Watties, E. T. Peck, Fred A. Nash, Charles L. Saunders, B. B. Wood, Leonard Everett of Council Bluffs, J. J. Dickey, John Collins, Thomas Orr, E. J. McClelland, C. K. Constant, Clement C. Chase, S. D. Barkholder.

Some Toasts Were Had. J. M. Woolworth acted as master of ceremonies. As soon as the meeting was over, he introduced General Dodge. The general spoke for nearly half a century ago, when Omaha was little more than a wilderness. "And that slight boy whom I met then has developed into one of the great men of the nation, a man whom Omaha is proud to greet and who is always honored by the people who remember the great service he did for this western country," said Mr. Woolworth in introducing General Dodge.

General Dodge was heartily applauded as he arose and graciously thanked the chairman for the compliments paid him. Then the general gave an interesting history of the beginning of Omaha and the construction of the Union Pacific railway. Dr. Miller was the next speaker. He prefaced his address by remarking that General Dodge's speech was the best he had heard in thirty years and that the true history he had heard of early Omaha and the surrounding country. Dr. Miller called attention to the versatility of General Dodge, who has shown remarkable power as an engineer, soldier and financier.

G. W. Watties expressed regret that it was not his pleasure to be associated with the great men who brought Omaha into existence and paid high tribute to the great work which General Dodge has done for the west. Henry W. Yates assured the company that General Dodge is a goodly and a tall of the contest he had with the general when the Union Pacific bridge was in controversy.

Obstacles Long Ago Vanquished. W. R. Kelly paid a high compliment to the gray-headed men who made up a large part of the company and said that he did not believe the men of today would have the courage to face all the obstacles which the older heads had overcome. He complimented General Dodge and the men who were associated with him on the great work they accomplished, and assured General Dodge that no monument of stone need be erected to his memory, as the great west stands as a monument which can never be destroyed.

Henry T. Clarke spoke of the great battle which was waged between Omaha and Bellevue, the rival locations for the terminus of the Union Pacific railway, and said that had it not been for Dr. G. L. Miller and General Dodge the bridge would have been located at Bellevue and Omaha would have been a hamlet, while the metropolis would have been at Bellevue. He praised the general on his great achievements and assured his listeners that Omaha owes a debt of gratitude to General Dodge which it will never be able to pay.

BURLINGTON FREIGHT DEPOT Plans for the structure are complete, showing an immense building for traffic.

Burlington architectural plans for the erection of a huge freight station along Eighth street are near completion. The structure will be a building of brick, trimmed with stone, the dimensions of which will be 140x300 feet.

This structure will front on Farnam street at Eighth with the 140-foot face. This will reach from the alley between Seventh and Eighth across the 122 feet of lot length and into Eighth street. The building will run from Farnam about 600 feet, which will take it within twenty-eight feet of Howard street, two blocks in length. For eighty feet back from Farnam street the station will be of two stories, this portion being elaborately fitted with of steel. The remaining 420 feet will be of one story only. From one end to the other the building will be fifty feet high at the center and twenty-five feet at the eaves. The west side, facing on Eighth street, will be the receiving side. Here a vast platform thirty-two feet deep will extend from the building its entire length, making the structure fifty feet from the street and leaving a fifty-foot roadway for an approach of teams. Within the receiving room will extend from end to end six tracks, three for incoming and three for outgoing traffic. The building will be capped with a steel roof and will cost in the neighborhood of $750,000. T. H. Kimball & Co. are preparing the plans.

WILL NOT OPEN GRACE STREET

Council Decides on Question in Connection With the Union Pacific East Omaha Deal.

At the meeting of the city council in committee of the whole yesterday afternoon a definite quietus was given the proposition to open Grace street through the Union Pacific yards from Eleventh street east, and this will not become a stipulation in the agreement between the city and the railroad company.

Ed George of George Bros. was there to represent the interests which wished the streets opened. It was desired as a means of egress and ingress for the territory lying just east of the Wimpere triangle. General Solicitor Kelley of the Union Pacific for the company said flatly that the street could never be opened through, as it would not only embarrass switching at that end of the yard, but would stop it altogether. It was shown, Mr. George that the new street granted by the railroad company to the city would serve the purpose of the interests which he represented perfectly. This roadway is but three blocks south of Grace street and runs through from Eleventh to Seventh.

By placing the matter on file the councilmen turned down the request from Mrs. F. J. Colman that the city pay the $5,000 which it cost her for repairs to her automobile necessary as a result of a breakdown caused by the vehicle running into a deep hole in the asphalt pavement on Sixteenth street last July last. The councilmen did not think the city should pay for the damage of having a sprocket wrenched from the rear axle by the accident.

Railroad attorneys galore attended the committee meeting. Burlington and Northwestern lawyers were there awaiting news from their latest injunction proceedings, which they thought might be acted upon by the council. No decision came, however, as Judge Dickinson was out of the city, so there were no fireworks.

PLATTSMOUTH SINGERS COMING

Elks Hope to Have "At the Old Cathedral Door" Sung at the Memorial Services.

The memorial committee which has in charge the memorial services of the Elks, which are to take place on Sunday forenoon next at 10 o'clock, in the Boyd theater, took special notice of the article in The Illustrated Sunday Bee on "At the Old Cathedral Door." Yesterday forenoon they called up by telephone Mr. Henry E. Gering, the exalted ruler of the Plattsburgh lodge of Elks, with the purpose in view to secure this new piece of sacred music for their program. Mr. Gering took the matter up with his usual promptness and energy, and at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon reported to the Elks' club here that Miss Clara Edna Street, the well-known contralto singer of Plattsburgh, had very kindly consented to sing the number. The author, Mrs. Letitia E. Burton, and the composer, Miss Kittie Cummins, both of Plattsburgh, are expected to come up on Sunday morning next with the Plattsburgh delegation of Elks to attend the service.
