The Iowa officers will make a strong effort to secure possession of H. E. Price, the young man with the many aliases and an aptness for passing checks, now under arrest in Columbus, Neb. Sheriff Frank Desmond yesterday will try to induce the authorities there to let him have Price, as the young man is badly wanted in Iowa. It is supposed here that Price was arrested within a short time after the forged check for $50 in Columbus, most of the money was recovered and that the authorities there may be willing to let Sheriff Desmond have him.

Smallpox Breaks Out at Cut-Off.

Smallpox has invaded West Council Bluffs, the portion of the city known as Cut-Off, on the Nebraska side of the river. Henry Quade, living at Sixth and Louisa streets, was reported to the Board of Health yesterday as suffering from the disease. Word was received here by the health officers that the Omaha authorities had offered to remove Quade to the penitentiary there, and that Dr. Ralph, city physician of Omaha, had secured medicine for him, but that Quade absolutely refused to accept any consideration from them, stating that as he was a resident of Council Bluffs, he was entitled to aid from the authorities of this city.

Fred Applicant Not Satisfied.

Fred Applicant, announcement of whose marriage to a young woman in Treynor, is apparently the victim of local papers, seems to have been the victim of a senseless joke at the hands of some one. He states that the announcement of the marriage is entirely without foundation, and that further he is not even acquainted with any young woman of the name of Miss Hopkins in Treynor or elsewhere. Mr. Applicant is highly indignant that his name should have been used in this manner, and he is endeavoring to discover the person who sent the item to the papers.

LABOR FIGHT IN DES MOINES

Federal Union is Formally Expelled from Trades Assembly.
SUNDAY SCHOOLS ARE DISCUSSED

College Presidents Advise State Teachers for Unity of Purpose in Sunday and Secular Institutions.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, Dec. 28.—(Special Telegram.)—A long-standing quarrel in the Trades and Labor assembly reached its culmination here today, when the Federal Labor union was formally expelled from the assembly for violation of the rules regarding interference with other unions.

THE ICEMAN IN FRANCE

Ice in the United States occupies an established position as one of the necessities of life, says the Boston Herald, and we may be sure that no nation could do without it. There is no substitute. If we cannot get coal we can burn wood or peat or a number of other things. If there is a potato famine we can eat turnips and beans, and almost every article which enters into the composition of daily eating can be replaced, if it falls us, but while we are awaiting the development of liquid air by cheap processes, when we find ourselves without ice we are in trouble indeed. The ice trust has lived here but a short time, while the whole electric world has been rocked. Mr. Hupp, it is claimed the Federal Labor union is controlled by a small coterie of city hall politicians and it was therefore expelled bodily after a hard fight.

State Teachers' Association.

The State Teachers' association, in session over Sunday, had a program today peculiarly appropriate to the day, and it contained addresses by some of the most eminent educators who have participated in the deliberations of the association. The sermon of the day was by Bishop Spaulding of Peoria in the auditorium in the forenoon. The day closed with a concert by the Des Moines Festival association. The only discussion was that on the bills for fare more for embroidery than for consumption, and are served by one rash enough to order them only by the thimbleful and at a high figure. Our consultant, however, Mr. Hayes, in his report to the State department, holds the belief that the use of silk is popularized in that country, to the great benefit of its food supply at least, and incidentally of the American manufacturers of refrigerators and ice-making machines.

They Surrender to Fear.

The sultan's decree of exile against the officers of the army that broke the windows of the palace they were in trying to get out at the night of the recent earthquake in Turkey brings up the question of how far such acts of fear should be punished, says the Army and Navy Journal. In fact, our Paris contemporary, LaFrance Militaire, mentions an officer of high rank who had maintained that such displays of cowardice on the part of officers were reprehensible. This officer, who is himself a model of military scrupulousness, admits that the man of war ought, of course, to respect his word and never fall in honor, but there are occasions, he points out, where it is not only praiseworthy, but dispensable to conceal if only to deceive the enemy to give confidence to one's own troops.

As a Fence Disturber.

Chicago Tribune: "Cyril Trevanion," exclaimed the high-spirited girl, "how dare you call upon me in such a plight? Have you been drinking?" "Worse than that, Pussitula," replied the youth, who had knobs all over his face and a discolored under one eye. "I've been fighting." "Fighting? And you have the assurance to come to me and boast of it?" "I have, Pussitula, I licked him." "Whom, you disgraceful wretch?" "The North Side slob that said we hadn't any good-looking girls down here in Hyde Park." "Oh, Cyril!" And she soothed him tenderly and put balm on his bruises.

Beyond Classification.

Louisville Times: The 'dodo will bite, the worm will turn. At one fashionable boarding house a young lady who daily ate hash with the other guests acquired quite a reputation for odd table manners. They were unique. She would haul any dish she fancied up to her place and eat it, regardless of the ugly glances of the others. They might cry out: "Help, help, help, or help wanted," but she never got it. One morning at breakfast her mamma saw a stern look of disapproval on the face of a new boarder, a swell young man. "Mr. Highbone," she began, suavely, "I trust you will pardon my daughter's table manners." "Bad manners," explained the indignant dodo, "why, she hasn't any manners at all!"

Skeleton in Church Steeple.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 28.—The skeleton found in the steeple of a negro church near East Lake was that of Winton White, a young man who was killed by lightning several years ago and was afterward a fugitive from justice. A negro woman mentioned herself as Bettie Healey, once the wife of White, says the remains were undoubtedly those of her husband.
