BAKER TO BE NEW MEXICAN

Supreme Court Justice Goes to His New Home Next Week.

TO RESIGN AS DISTRICT JUDGE AT ONCE

Will Return to Omaha Late in February and Stop Only Long Enough to Pack Up His Household Effects.

Judge Ben S. Baker returned yesterday from Washington after an absence of two weeks, during which time he has been made an associate justice of the supreme court of New Mexico and a New Mexican in sympathy, interest and all but actual citizenship. The latter he expects to acquire within the next twenty days, for he will leave Omaha for Santa Fe either the middle or the latter part of next week, and when he returns to Omaha late in February it will be as a New Mexican who comes only for his wife and his household effects.

When Judge Baker goes to Santa Fe next week it will be to take the bench immediately, as the supreme court meets there, but his residence in future will be Albuquerque, with which town he is delighted.

To Resign Immediately. His resignation from the district bench here will be forthcoming "in the immediate future," but he cannot yet specify the day. He spent the morning in his private office, and when asked at noon as to when he would resign the grand jury, replied that he could not answer until he had met with the body and been informed of what it had accomplished. During the forenoon the demands on him were so continuous and persistent that he fled from the court house early to make certain of finding time to lunch.

Good Time at Capital. "I would have been home sooner," said the judge, "but President Roosevelt sent us an invitation to the reception of the judiciary last Tuesday night and Mrs. Baker insisted that we stay. It was a fine affair and I enjoyed it, but I don't care to attend another right away, for there is too much of a jam. I met Senator Hanna there for the first time since the platform broke down with a year he was speaking at Auburn, Neb., a year ago last fall, and he remembered the incident and laughed over it as one of the most amusing of his tour. "As for President Roosevelt himself, well, he is simply the biggest man who ever sat in the presidential chair, so far as individually is concerned. I marvel that he can stand up under the load of responsibility that rests upon him, but he seems absolutely at ease at all times.

Rough Rider for Clerk. "The president was very gracious with me and it is at his request that I shall appoint Captain W. E. Dame as clerk of my court. Dame has been a resident of the territory twenty-three years and was one of the rough riders, so he stands high with the chief executive.

"These New Mexicans are a royal lot of fellows. They entertained Mrs. Baker and me there in Washington as nicely as it could have been done in their own homes down south and adopted me at once, always speaking of 'we Mexicans.'" They imported the judiciary committee of the senate for my immediate confirmation, but the committee is a stickler on form and its members could do nothing until they all got together, though individually they were all for me. Two were out of the city and the delay was the result of having to wait for their return.

Omaha Home for Sale. "My home out on South Thirty-third street, for sale, but the rental agent has had difficulty, I discover, in carrying on negotiations, for when we left we instructed the housekeeper to admit no peddlers or others, and the girl took the instruction so literally that when the house agent took parties out to look over the place they could not get past the front door. I am going to sell, however, for henceforth I am a New Mexican, with no other interest in Nebraska than the very kindest of memories."

MILLER PROLONGS RECOUNT

Court Grants Leave to Canvas the Precincts Uncontested by a Unit.

Every ballot cast for clerk of Douglas county will have been inspected and passed upon before the completion of the recount that Charles Unitt, republican candidate, Harry C. Miller, the democratic nominee, was declared by the official board of the county to have been elected by a majority of 32.

Mr. Unitt asked for a recount of only certain wards and precincts, and the recount was held yesterday morning and in these Miller made a gain of eight.

In the afternoon the recounting was continued rapidly until a late hour, when the Fifth precinct of the Eighth ward was disposed of, with the Unitt majority wiped out, it is hoped that by working late tomorrow the entire recount may be completed with the week.

NEW TURN AT PANHANDLING

Colored Man Who is Said to Have Buried Seven Mothers Comes to Genuine Grief.

Dick Dudley, colored, is locked up at the police station, charged with "panhandling," a novel form of crime which in the Copper's Unabridged is defined thus: "Panhandling, getting money on the strength of hard luck story, or to abate a nuisance. The most common forms are (a) circulating petition to raise funds to bury dead mother or to ship home body of dead brother; (b) accepting money as price of silence, practiced mostly by organ grinders, etc."

"He was a whry-colored, misbegotten scoundrel who for a decade had canvassed the parish, panhandling the peasantry.—Barrac. It remained for Dudley, however, to make a new departure in the art of panhandling. He took the form as told to the police by Jack Brownfield, proprietor of the Midway saloon: "He came down stairs in his shirt sleeves in his place yesterday forenoon and said he'd been robbed of $12 during the night. About midnight, he said, he'd rented a room of the night bartender and had gone to bed. He had tried to leave his money down stairs, according to rules, but the bartender hadn't been able to open the safe and so he had been compelled to take it to his room with him. "It was impossible to get at the night bartender at that hour, so he made a verified fellow's story, and as he had a veritable roar, I finally gave him $12, taking his receipt for it. "When the bartender finally showed up he said Dudley hadn't been near the house the night before and that the room he said he was robbed in hadn't been occupied or even unlocked during the night." Upon this information, detectives were sent out to search for Dudley and he now occupies a cell in the city jail.

He is a familiar figure about the police station. "He's held jobs as porter in half the hotels in the city," said an officer who knows Dudley from the grave of some civil war hero buried mothers within the last five years. Once he begged money to meet an assessment on a life insurance policy that didn't exist; at another time he circulated a petition to raise funds for the erection of a tombstone at the grave of some civil war hero and again he undertook the erection of a church. As a "panhandler" he is a recognized past master, but I never before knew him to be quite as bold as he was in his Midway saloon trick."

In police court Friday afternoon Dudley was fined $50 and costs, the heaviest fine thus far imposed by Judge Berka.

Mixup on Licenses.

Marriage licenses are secured in the office of the clerk of the county court. Fishing and hunting licenses are secured in the county clerk's office. A prospective groom got into the wrong place yesterday and happened to have with him a friend whom Frank Dewey, deputy county clerk, remembered had been in for a fishing and hunting license a few days before. The matrimonial candidate asked simply for "a license" and Mr. Dewey assumed that he wanted one for fishing and hunting. That is how it happened that Mr. Dewey said, quite familiarly: "I s'pose you are both going to make your killings at the same place."

The applicant looked a little surprised, but said very politely that he believed not. "Do you go out often?" "Why, no! I have never approved of that sort of thing."

"You haven't? Well, I am not with you in that opinion. I think a man is all the better for a little sport now and then. I would go myself if I could ever find the time. Going to take a boat?" "No, what little traveling we do will be by rail."

"Well, that is the most comfortable way, but I like to put on my old clothes and just cut loose on a trip of that kind. I have had several of them in former days and each one seemed just a little jollier than the last. You will get to liking the fun of it after you have been out once and will probably want to repeat it all every year. Most people do."

The groom-elect was flushed and perspiring, but he said nothing. Presently Mr. Dewey finished filling in the blanks and as he tossed the license over the counter he said: "Take my advice and if you have a wife don't invite her to go along on this trip. Women are all right, but they are out of place in this sort of thing. Just get a good dog and that is all the company you need. Now—why, what's the matter? Anything wrong with that license?"

"The license is all right of its kind, I believe, but it will hardly answer my purpose."

"Why not? It's about the only kind we ever issue."

"Well, that may be so, but I cannot very well be married on a license to hunt and fish. In fact, I am through hunting and fishing. What I wish now is a writ of attachment on the game."

Mr. Dewey whistled long and gently. Then, without attempting further remark, he led the way to Harry Morrill's desk in the county court rooms on the floor above

Girls Find a Shoemaker.

One of two young women, riding down in an elevator of the Pastern block the other morning was overheard to remark: "Now the next thing to do will be to hunt up a shoemaker."

Constable King, a fellow passenger, thought there was an opportunity to drum up the business and he asked the young woman a favor at the same time, so he said: "I'm just going up there, ladies. If you'll come with me I'll show you the way."

"Here's some clients for you, judge," said the constable, bowing to Attorney W. S. Shoemaker. He found chairs for them.

The young woman looked about the shop dubiously for a moment, then read the word "Shoemaker" on the door, and were reassured. One of them fumbled in the recesses of a big telescope valise, and brought to light a disipated pair of patent leather garters.

"How much will you charge to half-sole these?" she asked, passing the footgear to "his honor."

The half-dozen visitors in the office laughed immoderately. Judge Shoemaker showed the young women his business card, whereon they searched in vain for "repairing neatly done." They declined to leave their names, but from a letter dropped by one of them it was learned that they were Bellevue college students.

Tells a Woman's Troubles.

Robert McElroy, of Detroit, representing an insurance company, says that he is Omaha's hoodoo or else Omaha is his hoodoo. He reached town yesterday and this explains his charge: "I come to Omaha rather frequently, but not at regular intervals, and every time I come I find the delegates to some convention have arrived just ahead of me and snapped up the rooms I want. The first time I came, the exposition was on and President McKinley's party was here. Under those circumstances I was content to take just any old thing in the way of a room, but the next time I ran into the woman suffragists or Women's Christian Christian Temperance union or something of that kind, and after that I struck the state political convention. Then it was the Nebraska newspaper, or the lumber dealers, I don't remember which. I don't like to quit my hotel, but I have had to put up with strange company nearly every time. Once I slept in the same room with two fellows who had known the same traveling man thirteen years and wanted to talk it all over after they got in bed. Another time I shared an apartment with a lumber dealer who could score in more keys than a calliope and then with a newspaper man who cursed the office devil or somebody else in his sleep.

"But through all these experiences I confess to have had some consolation in the thought of the predicament of a woman over in Iowa who wrote for a room at a Mason City hotel while I was there. It was during a convention of the State Dairy association, as I remember it, and this woman was the secretary. She signed her name without any feminine prefix and with only the initials of her first two names. The result was that when she wrote to the manager of the hotel to reserve a room for her, and signed herself as the secretary, he treated the application as that of a man and when she arrived late at night, gave her name and asked to be shown to the room assigned her, she found the manager who wanted any too bright anyhow, sent her up to the room in which the association's president was already asleep. She didn't discover her mistake until she was inside and had the door locked, preparatory to disrobing, and then she raised a detour of a row. Finally the proprietor was called from his bed and had to explain that he supposed the secretary was a man, and, being crowded for room, had thought to economize satisfactorily by making one apartment with two beds in it serve for both executives of the association."

Get Rich Quick Scheme.

He walked slowly up to the highly polished bar, took a drink of whisky and laid down a $5 bill.

"There," said he despondently, "that's the last piece of money I've got to my name and when that's gone I don't know where I'm going to eat or sleep."

He proceeded to relate a hard luck tale to the bartender, and a stranger who was standing by felt sorry for him.

"Let me have another drink of that whisky," said he, after the change from the five had been handed to him.

After the second drink the customer felt more cheerful, remarking that he would get along all right and come out on top of the financial troubles that seemed to be bearing him down. Then he took the third drink, threw out his chest, smiled broadly, tapped his coat where the inside pocket ought to be, and declared:

"Say, John, I've got $150 right here in my pocket, and—"

"Here, John," yelled the bystander, "give me three drinks of that same whisky right away."

CONNOLLY FALLS INTO LINE

Agrees with Commissioner O'Keefe That Payroll Can Be Reduced.

INSISTS ON ASSESSMENT REFORMS ALSO

Second District Member of County Board Promises to Continue Fight for Higher Assessments Against Franchised Corporations.

County Commissioner James P. Connolly has hailed forth a retrenching axe of his own. It has not fallen yet, but Connolly promises that it shall fall and that it will light on political friend and foe alike. He said yesterday:

"There is a positive emergency existing now in the affairs of Douglas county and I am in for applying the axe all along the line, but particularly am I anxious that the assessments of the corporations be boosted to a plane of absolute equality with the smaller property owners. This emergency is partly the result of the failure of the savings banks, which cost the county $68,000—an amount that has appeared on the treasurer's books as a fictitious balance ever since.

"The board has had to worry along in this crippled condition and try to keep things going, but now I am in favor of saving every nickel and every dollar that we can, so that the general fund may be replenished from the balances left in the other funds a year from next July, and that from this lot of balances accumulated by economy we may pay off some of the indebtedness. Ready to Slash Payrolls. "Twenty thousand dollars of this saving can be made by pruning the number of county employes and their salaries and I shall favor doing so, but I still maintain that that is only a drop in the bucket. I

FAVOR BLUFF TRACT PARK

North Town People Meet and Request City to Make Purchase of Land.

The residents of the northern part of the city held a meeting at McKenna's hall Thursday night to discuss the question of the purchase of the Bluff Tract Park. Park Commissioners Cornish and Craig were present and made talks on the subject, as did Judge Doane, Judge Ferguson, Councilman Loback and others.

A resolution was adopted favoring the immediate purchase of the bluff tract and expressing hope that it would soon be possible for the commission to secure the Cut Off lake tract. A representative of the legal department of the city said that the title to the land included in the proposed bluff tract had been examined and found perfect. A resolution was also adopted calling for the construction of a market and recommending the use of the Capital avenue site as a measure of economy.

Running Pool Room Not Illegal.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 17.—Police Judge Brumback, in a written decision, today held that the running of a pool room, where bets are taken on foreign horse races, is not in violation of the city ordinance against gambling. The decision was rendered in the case of Charles Oldham, who was arrested last week for conducting a pool room and accepting bets on Louisville and other races. He was discharged.
