Establishes Athletic Department, Since the return of President Roosevelt from his long and interesting "swing around the circle" the strenuous chief executive has been paying considerable attention to athletics and has had one of the rooms of the White House fitted up as a department of physical culture. This room used as the sacred council chamber of and which will probably prove fatal to the dyce of Lincoln and Miss Hitt of the Peru which for more than two generations was presidents and their cabinets, has been girl. wholly denuded of everything reflective of the old days and instead now holds a varied assortment of sporting and athletic goods, including boxing gloves, sword sticks, fencing swords and foils, padded vests and gloves and other implements used to keep the person of the president in "fit" condition. The historic apartment now used as the president's training quarters contains no reminders of Lincoln and his political advisers seated at the cabinet table approving the emancipation proclamation, or of Grant, Haves, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley or the long list of presidents who had preceded them. Nowhere can be seen a suggestion of the great friends. national problems that have been fought out by the giant intellects in the room in days gone by. On the contrary, the room has an up-to-dateness that is very startling. and yet one cannot help but admire this very much up-to-date president because he is the living embodiment of the old Latin maxim, "A sound mind in a sound body, It has been generally supposed that what the president calls "the department of physical culture of this administration" hope was located in the basement in one of the rooms formerly used as a billiard room or laundry. It will therefore be a shock to those stickiers for propriety to know that one of the finest rooms in the White House has been given over to athletic purposes.

Quartermaster General Humphrey, who has just returned from hard campaigning in the far east, has little patience with those who look upon the Japanese in a favorable light. The general tells some very interesting stories of the Chinese campaign and in which he came in close contact with the Japanese soldiery. General Humphrey is of the opinion that when the clash of arms comes between Russia and Japan the Russians will inflict such punishment upon the Japanese people that they will be a generation in recovering from the Butt of the quartermaster's department and a former Washington newspaper man, returned to the states with General Humphrey, and he is now in Washington for the purpose of closing up his accounts. Captain Butt says that the American people have very erroneous ideas as to the Japanese, and denominates the empire as a toy empire, everything being done along toy lines. He states that the navy of Japan is greatly overestimated and that the fighting qualities of the Japanese soldier are by no means what they are cracked up to be.
