The remains of a stone-age city have been discovered in which the bones of animals of great size were found side by side, with stone implements, many of which are ornamented with gems. In a mound near the creek was the almost complete skeleton of a man who when alive must have been nearly nine feet high and of powerful build. Nearby was the skeleton of a woman a trifle smaller.

The recent outbreaks of mob violence emphasize the two lessons, one for our race, and one for the other citizens of our country, south and north; for it is to be noted that the work of the lyncher is not confined to one section of the country. The lesson for us is that we should see to it that so far as the lutturnee of parent, school or pupil is conserned, no effort be spared to impress upon our own people the fact that idleness and crime should cease. We should let the world know on all proper occasions that we consider no legal punishment too severe for the wretch of any race who attempts to outrage a woman. The lesson for the other portion of the nation is that both in the making and in the execution, the same law should apply to the negro as to the white man. This should be meted out with equal justice to black and white. Whenever the nation forgets, or is tempted to forget, this basic principle the whole fabric of government is threatened with destruction. This is true whether it relates to conditions in Texas, Indiana or Delaware.
