lets, or outside the pairs or their relation and their race. Of these, perhaps the most interesting are those treating the careers of "John Albert," by Isidore Singer, Ph. D., managing editor; "John Tobias," by F. T. Haneman, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y., which is accompanied by a quaint illustration treating "The House of the Body," "Crematorium," by Joseph Reinach, Paris, France; "Daniel ben Moses Al Kumi," a Karaites, by Samuel Penanaki, Ph. D., Warsaw, Russia; "Darmstadt," by F. J. Hartog, Wingham, Manchester, England; "Darmstadt," by Victor Emmanuel, New York City. The work is being published by Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York.

The remarkable series of articles published in Broadway Weekly under the heading of "How New York Amuses Itself," is attracting much attention in the newspaper world. This week's installment is entitled "The Night Cabbie; Whom He Drives; Where He Drives, What He Hears." Other strong features are "The Vice Trust of New York," "Love Affairs of Well-Known Actors" and "A Yarker in Paris."

The concluding installment of a new story in two parts by Morgan Robertson, author of "Sinful Peck," appears in the current number of Harper's Weekly. It is entitled "The Sleep Walker," and is a remarkably interesting study of the effect of a hypnotic delusion on a man and his wife.

Marion Harland's garden at Sunnybanker country place at Pompton, among the hills of northern New Jersey—unlike a garden in this city like the one among other flower beds, for the vines and shrubs and plants that constitute its beauty have been gathered in all parts of the world, and each has a story of historic or sentimental interest.

John Fox, whose serial, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" will conclude in the Pictorial Number of Scribner's, recently received a letter from an unknown admirer saying that he was "writing a dramatically strong and vigorous story, as brave a tale as 'Crittenden' and as picturesque. His humor is as fresh and keen as the wind from off his native mountains."
