GAME IS RAPID AND UNCERTAIN TO LAST

Locals Play All Around the Visitors in the Field and Bunch Their Hits Better Than the Missourians,

Yesterday was Kelly day at Vinton street park-Kelly, the umpire. Besides putting spectator out of the grandstand and the grounds by the aid of Chief Donahue and a squad of his choice policemen, he ordered Pa Rourks off the Omaha players' bench and chestily announced in a sonorous tone that he was yearning for more empires. to conquer. Kelly rose up at Pa because Pa was feeling good over the way his children were slapping it to the Missourians and once in a while chipped in just to show his fatherly affection. It was Kelly's authoritative manner which angered the crowd when Rourke left the bench and led a number of spectators in the grandstand to manifest their disgust and one to give up his seat at the earnest request of Mr. Kelly threatened to throw the game if Rourke and the spectator did not go. A squad of home-roasters who were "throwing it into" Rourke harder than St. Paul Kelly was getting it, however, was allowed to remain seated.

The game was a tight one and from Omaha's standpoint, a well played one. The Jo Joes, however, lined up with too fat an error column. The locals simply outplayed the visitors at every turn of the road, except in number of hits. Each team slapped out nine safe ones, but the locals managed to cash theirs in to better advantage. The Rangers put up a most rapid game in the field. Genins in center caved in over four big drives, without a muff; Kelly at short drew four assists and one put-out; Miller and Carter each nabbed the only two that came their way; Shugart, Hickey, Gonding and Thornton were up and coming, while Sanders copped onto four assists in the box. Sanders did his share toward batting out his own victory, too, for he poked the ball twice safely, each time advancing a runner. It was Genins' day at the bat, though; two safe ones and a sacrifice he got.

Genius Steals Home,

In the fifth inning Genins performed the difficult feat of stealing home. With no one on base be drove a liner into left field, making second on Donahue's fumble. Then Miller got a life on an error by Plake at short. This advanced Genine to third. Plake, who had a day off, stood in a stuper on second base with the ball in his hand, evidently watching to see that Dusty didn't try to rob him of the bag. In the meantime Genins, assuming a most hazardous risk, made a successful dash for the plate. This created a noise which woke Plake up and he sent the ball following Frank to Milwanker the rubber. Garvin returned it like a Indianapolis shot to second in time to catch Miller, who was just lying down, preparatory to sliding in.

The Rangers' game had life and ginger in it from first to last and gave evidence that there's many a good fight left in 'em yet, even with Kelly as umpire.

Diehl made one of the most sensational catches of a red hot liner that has been seen on the diamond here for a long time It came from Genin's bat in the sixth when a must would have meant a run. The
