He Had Considerable Money with Him.

The police are looking for O. A. Raacke of Pasadena, Cal., who came to Council Bluffs Thursday afternoon, since when no trace of him can be got. As he had about him, fears that he may have met with foul play.

Raacke, who is said to be a former newspaper man, is stopping at the Vienna hotel in Omaha. Thursday afternoon he left the hotel, telling his wife he was going to see an attorney in the New York Life building and later would go over to Council Bluffs where, if he was wanted, he could be reached by calling up 'phone No.

He did not return home Thursday night and yesterday Mrs. Raacke learned that he had not been to see the attorney in the New York Life building. The machinery exhibit will be larger than usual, also, and much additional space has been found necessary for implements, fences and farm equipments. The management has spent about $30,000 this year in improvements, including cates. The contract calls for about 6,300 a new stock judging pavillon for the swine and sheep departments and brick walks, fences and new buildings of various kinds. The method of getting to the fair has been improved by a new street car station in the grounds, so that passengers will be landed within the grounds and not at an outer gate. On the whole the prospect is excellent for a fine exhibition this year.

Asking for a Receiver.

In the district court this morning Judge Howe took up the matter of an application for a receiver for the German Mutual Insurance company of this city, the application being made by the attorney general and state insurance department. The company was originally started in Council Bluffs, but was brought to Des Moines without legal authority and was sold to B. F. Loose and others, who were doing business with the company. The claim is made that dered replaced with artificial stone. All the company was never fully organised and never had any written permission, in legal form, for the transaction of business and that despite the protests of the state insurance department the officers continued to write policies, which the attorney general alleges are worthless. DON'T OFFEND THE PORTER Magnates of Sleeping Cars Decide to Assert Themselves and Shun the Tip.

An amazing story, which has especial interest in the season of vacation travel, him fall and immediately hurried to his comes from Chicago. The purport of it is that the sleeping car porters in the Pullman service are organizing a union to promote the suppression of tips from passengers. Committees are now at work on the constitution and by-laws of the organization, and on the code of rules which it is to enforce. It is gravely announced that those represented in this would be safeguarded and life take on a more reseate hue generally if their attentions to the traveler could be divested of hours that the body could be recovered. any mercenary element and they might feel that they were assisting to make him comfortable for the pure joy of being helpful and serviceable. It is their high purpose, therefore, to ask the public to aid them in stamping out the tip custom, so repugnant to every right-minded American, irrespective of race, color, or Herdman, both of Lincoln, were united in previous condition of servitude. There is, marriage last evening at 6 o'clock at Cenhowever, a preliminary step to be taken tenary Methodist Episcopal parsonage, Rev that the opportunities of the position have been deemed large enough to make it desirable, irrespective of the com-

The present scale of wages for groom left today for Lincoln, where they sleeping-car porters is adjusted to the fact expect to make their home. pensation it carries on the Pullman company's pay rolls. Hence, it will be necessary that the wages of the sleeping-car porter be increased to a figure representing satisfactory compensation. If this is done, he will be in a position to courfeously wave aside the degrading tip when tendered by the passenger whose clothes he has just dusted over those of the passenger who last received the same gentle ministrations at his hands, and, touching his cap, say with conscious pride: "Excuse me, sir. Your impulses are indubitably generous; but my services are amply remunerated by the corporation which employs me, and the union of which I am a member does not condone the superimposition upon our liberal emolument establishment of such an understanding of incorporation of the Sheridan Farmers the porter's status quickly and completely, forthwith, and left it until the last as merited rebuke to selfishness. He could smear one's shoes with the customary sleeping-car mixture of crude petroleum, molasses and plumbago without a qualm of conscience, sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust that what cost the pas-pengers nothing was worth it. He could make his morning rounds an hour and a half outside the terminal station with the customary lie that the train is due to arrive in fifteen minutes, and not feel that his mendacity imperiled anything of It would seem as if the management of the Pullman company should regard this change with great satisfaction, as of public interest and calculated to increase the popularity of their service. We understand, however, that their natural impulse of co-operation with the porters in their laudable effort at self-elevation is restrained by a lurking susplcion that whatever the scale of wages agreed to, the demand for the customary tip would continue as insistent as at present, and that the traveler classified as intangible, in the sense that he could not be "touched," would fare as badly then as now. This is unfortunate, but it suggests a way in which the public can assist the porters in accomplishing their laudable object, which, like all reforms of ancient abuses, involves some temporary sacrifice. Knowing how the porters feel about tips, let those who ride in sleepers generously refrain hereafter from offering them. This will compel the Pullman company to revise its wage tariff to retain its servants, and very soon the new order would be cerned. No right-minded person would voluntarily do anything to humiliate a sleeping-car porter, hurt his feelings, or repress his yearnings for a higher plane of self-respect, and since the tip does all this the tip must go.-New York Times,
