The case was tried at the May term of the United States district court and a large number of witnesses were examined. The verdlet returned was "guilty without capital punishment."

Notice was at once given by the attorney or the defense, J. M. McFarland, that a motion for a new trial would be made, and this motion was heard several weeks ago before Judge McPherson, but he reserved his opinion until yesterday.

In concluding his review of the case Judge McPherson says: "The more I consider the case (and I have considered it for many weeks), the more I believe it to be a case above and beyond all, I cannot see how it can be said that not only is it a case of murder, but that there is no reasonable make the two tickets identical it has been no right to hide behind the verdict of the jury and pronounce a judgment for murder.
