In Retrospect.

One was a stately dame on literature; two were sprightly maidens of a rather domestic bent.

Three had a praiseworthy yearning for Ibsen, Unge and such.

Four had her charm by proxy (pepa was very rich).

Five was a college girl—captained her base ball nine.

Six weighed a hundred and forty (the one whom he asked to dine).

Seven could waltz divinely, looked like a poster girl.

Eight had a fetching dimple and an over-the-shoulder curl.

Nine had a nose patrician, but an irritating walk.

Ten baked at conversation, but could make piano talk.

Eleven was sympathetic, laughed at his oldest jokes.

Twelve was refined and pretty, but he couldn't stand her folks.

Thirteen—unlucky lady—had never a charm, "is said."

But out of a "baker's dozen" she was the one.

WOMAN IN CLUB AND CHARITY

Two hundred and three voting delegates, representing 109 of the 119 clubs in the federation, was the report of the credential committee at the present convention of the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs last week, and in every other respect the meeting was as successful. The chance that brought to the meeting three officers of the national organization, the president, Mrs. Dimies T. S. Denison, vice president, Mrs. Robert Burdette, and recording secretary, Mrs. William Coad; Mrs. Dore Lyons of New York and Miss Mary Hay of New York, besides Miss Jane Adams, made the meeting the most notable in the history of the federation. The conference on the work of the various standing committees was another and equally important feature. Conducted by their respective chairmen, they afforded especial help to those interested in the different lines and their inspiration promises much that is helpful to the work of the coming year.

The unfortunate political undercurrent was the one regrettable part of the gathering, but even out of this good came, for it made the occasion for a better understanding, embracing and trying though it was, that will, it is hoped, avoid a similar occurrence in the future and the re-election of the entire executive board, as far as the members were eligible to re-election, proved the loyalty of the women of the state to the officers that have rendered such efficient service during the last year.

The longest time that the suffragists have ever given to any one subject in their convention was consumed in the discussion of property rights last Wednesday at the annual state convention held at Nebraska City. The conference occupied the entire afternoon and it was not until the latter part of the evening that it drew to a close. The first address was by Hon. D. L. Johnson of Omaha, who outlined the present condition of law, illustrating it with his chart on "Intestate Succession of Property in Nebraska." With the chart before them the delegates saw the intestate share of his widow. "We men have provided that if there is nobody else in the world for the property to descend to, then the women may have it." He advocated a fee simple share and equal property rights for men and women.

Mrs. Mary G. Andrews, who spoke from the woman's point of view, emphasized the fact that women are not asking for privileges under the law, but equity; she cited many instances that had come under her observation of gross injustice to women in the present law. She said: "In the marriage ceremony the bridegroom says, 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow,' but under the Nebraska law she gets nothing except a child's share in the personal property."

Mr. E. W. Dixon, who spoke from the man's point of view, emphasized the fact that women are not asking for privileges under the law, but equity; she cited many instances that had come under her observation of gross injustice to women in the present law. She said: "In the marriage ceremony the bridegroom says, 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow,' but under the Nebraska law she gets nothing except a child's share in the personal property."

A member of the legislature was invited to speak and he threw a bomb shell into the discussion by advocating a larger life estate instead of a fee simple share. When he sat down so many women rose at once to reply that the chairman had difficulty in recognizing them in turn. Nearly every woman in the conference made one speech or more, and every voice was heard for a fee simple share. When the women had finished the legislator said he was convinced that the women of that convention ought to have a fee simple share since they understood the subject so well. The overwhelming sentiment of the convention was in favor of a community property law.

The following plan of work for the coming year was adopted:

First—That agitation for property rights for women, whereby the present power law law shall be changed so that the surviving shall receive a share of real estate in fee simple, be made the special work of the Federation of Nebraska.

Second—That each club aim to double its membership and to organize new clubs in the territory where it is located, and where two or more clubs exist in a county, a rotary organization to be formed.

Third—That a committee of Work Before Large Assemblies be authorized to establish headquarters in Omaha, St. Paul, St. Louis, etc., wherever practicable, that the enrollment work be presented at each gathering, and that the committee of Work Before Large Assemblies be organized.

Fourth—That each club member be urged to enroll their ten names in the circulation during the year.

Fifth—That suffrage contests be held as a method of propaganda, and designed to relate directly to woman suffrage.

Sixth—That each club secure an increased amount of literature for general distribution.

Seventh—That effort be made to place works on woman suffrage in state and city libraries.

Eighth—That, inasmuch as woman's enfranchisement is primarily a moral question, we endeavor to secure hearings before religious organizations.

Ninth—That we co-operate with the Committee on Industrial Problems of the National Suffrage association, in its agitation against child labor in the United States, and to offer to receive charter conditions for wage-earning women, and that a special committee for this work be appointed.

Tenth—That we endorse the work of the Peace and Arbitration committee of the National Council of Labor and Bredge of our hearty cooperation.

Eleventh—That we urge upon suffragists the support of the daily and weekly newspapers that give the broadest and most intelligent exposition of their work, regardless of political affiliations.

The resolutions adopted by the women were more lengthy than usual, and are in part, as follows:

Resolved, That the suffrage is the most important step in the advancement of woman and it is most difficult of attainment, that it must be secured through the votes of the ignorant and vicious, as well as those of the educated and upright; therefore:

Resolved, That we rejoice in the interest manifested by the newly enfranchised women in their elections this year, recognizing that their activity refutes the charge that they are content with the status that women do not desire the ballot.

Resolved, That we congratulate the women voters of Kansas on their recent victory at the elections in abolishing requirements made of women seeking office, and the belief that it will result in a large increase in our membership.

Resolved, That our slogan for 1904 shall be "Double the Membership." We believe that the awakening of the south to the woman suffrage idea, and bid a hearty greeting to the coming year, and that women do not desire the ballot.
